$50,000 Cash and Immunity Offered in Case Girl Still Lives.

Crime of Revenge Now Held Theory

'Contact Man' Is Trailed After Abduction of Mrs. Stoll.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 11 (U.P.).—The millionaire family of Mrs. Berry V. Stoll, kidnaped society belle of the Blue Grass Country, was frantic with fear tonight lest she be killed by her abductor.

Federal Department of Justice agents announced they are withdrawing from the case "in order to expedite the safe return of Mrs. Stoll."

Members of the Stoll family said they were "terrified by the thought" that the 26-year-old beauty, seized from her sick bed and brutally beaten, may die "unless her release is secured within a few hours."

Husband Ready to Pay.

Her husband, wealthy vice president of the Stoll Oil Refinery Co., was ready to meet the kidnaper's demand for $50,000 and had the money available as he paced the floor of the family mansion on exclusive Lime Kiln road.

It was from the home—one of the show places of Louisville overlooking the Ohio River—that Mrs. Stoll was kidnaped late yesterday.

"We'll agree to anything," said the victim's 30-year-old husband. His hair was disheveled, his face wan and drawn.

He was ready to pledge complete immunity for the kidnaper, as well as payment of the $50,000 if his wife should be returned to him alive, he said.

The Stolls, leaders for years in the business and society life of Louisville, reputedly are worth at least $1,000,000.

Tonight, more than 24 hours after Mrs. Stoll's abduction by a man who beat her until blood streamed down her face because she asked him to take a check and leave, authorities announced they held a "definite lead" to the criminal.

Contact Man Nailed.

From Nashville, Tenn., came reports that police were on the trail of a man supposedly named as the "contact" in the ransom note left in Mrs. Stoll's bedroom.

The note, it has been established, directed that negotiations be carried out in another State, supposedly Indiana or Tennessee.

Mrs. Stoll, a striking brunette of slight build, who came from Bryn Mawr to take her place as a leader among the select society of Louisville, was dragged to an automobile by her kidnaper.

She had been ill with a severe cold for three weeks and wore only negligee and a checkered blue coat, hastily thrown about her shoulders by the kidnaper, as she was carried bleeding and screaming from her home.

Authorities had a fairly clear-cut description of the criminal, pro-

Reduction Made to Meet Texas Overproduction Conditions.

Gasoline at independent and major oil company stations was selling at a reduction of 2 cents a gallon yesterday.

Officials of the industry said the cut was general throughout the Atlantic Coast States in the territory served by the Standard Oil of New Jersey and Louisiana, and was made to meet overproduction conditions in the East Texas field.

One official declared gasoline which he described as "hot"—fuel taken from storage tanks in defiance of production restrictions—was selling in East Texas for as low as 2 cents a gallon.

At independent stations, straight gasoline was retailing at 13.8 cents a gallon. The major companies were selling a similar brand of gas for 14.8. High test fuel sold for 16.8.

The initiative in the price reduction was understood to have been taken by Standard. Advised of the intended action, other distributors in Standard territory decided to follows.

Officials were emphatic in stating that the cuts did not constitute a price war. They said prices would remain at present levels indefinitely.

One Vote for Dizzy Dean.

Litchfield, Conn., Oct. 11 (U.P.).—Dizzy Dean failed by 349 of a possible 350 votes when his name was submitted at a caucus to choose a Republican representative in the State General Assembly. Nobody would admit casting the vote for the St. Louis Cardinal pitcher.

Wife-Poisoner Suspect Maps Defense Plans

Attorney Believed Chosen for Fredericksburg Trial Nov. 8.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—W. Marshall King, local attorney, was indicated here today as defense counsel for Edward C. Bell, prominent business man who faces charges of attempted poisoning of his invalid wife in a case which has excited more public interest here than any event since the Brown-Kurz murder last March. A closed conference took place between King and Miss Irma Bell, daughter of the accused man.

Asked tonight to confirm reports of his appointment as defense counsel, King said he and Alvin W. Embrey, another Fredericksburg attorney, had been consulted by members of the Bell family.

Preliminary trial has been set for November 8. Bell was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging "poisoning with malicious intent," and was freed on $5,000 bail posted by his brother, A. W. Bell. Conviction would carry a sentence of 3 to 18 years imprisonment.

Predicts Conviction.

Albert V. Bryan, named as prosecuting attorney yesterday by Judge Frederick W. Coleman, said today he had sufficient evidence to convict. He said that he would produce five or six witnesses, but declined to name them.

Several small bottles, alleged to contain deadly poisons and said to have been found in the Bell home, were held on behalf of the State today by City Sergt. J. C. Conway, Chichester.

Bell today said he could make no public statement now, but inferred he might have one later. When arrested he professed innocence and declared himself ready to proceed with immediate trial without benefit of counsel.

Mrs. Bell is suffering no immediate serious effects from the alleged poisoning, according to neighbors who saw her, accompanied by Mr.

Floyd Escapes After Staging Iowa Gun Duel

Net Spread for Outlaw After He Flees With Two Companions.

Des Moines, Oct. 11 (AP).—State agents from the Bureau of Investigation and the Mitchell County sheriff engaged in a gun battle with "Pretty Boy" Floyd near McIntire today, but the notorious Oklahoma bandit escaped, the bureau announced.

The bureau reported that Floyd fled north in a light car, presumably toward Minnesota.

St. Paul authorities were immediately notified and a net was spread to catch the widely sought bandit.

Floyd was named yesterday as one of the perpetrators of the union station massacre in Kansas City and as being sought by the Government for that crime.

The bureau office said Agent A. G. Haight had been working in the territory for the last several days on a tip that the Oklahoman was in the area.

The sheriff's office at Osage said it was reported there Floyd had been positively identified, but could offer no further details of the gun battle. The office said two others were reported with Floyd in the car. The trio was said to be clad in overalls.

No additional information was obtainable from the Bureau of Investigation, since only a meager report of the gunfight reached the office here before officers started on the trail.

On receipt of the information an alarm was immediately broadcast by police radio.

Triple Slaying Suspect Caught After 5 Years

Williamson, W. Va., Oct. 17 (AP).—After a five-year hunt, D. E. Helm, former police chief of Cumberland Gap, Va., today caused the arrest of a man he charges with killing his brother, his sister-in-law and their 7-year-old child at Burdine, Ky., in 1929.

The man jailed is Dan Grey, 30, alias Dan Polock. Helm said his brother's family was slain on Christmas Day.

Policemen Will Turn Orators; Seventy Start to Class Monday

It is a busy downtown intersection. Traffic is snarled. Horns toot, motorists shout. Crowds gather on the sidewalk as a policeman, on his raised platform in the center of everything, proudly commands attention and signals for quiet. He doffs his hat and begins.

"Ladies, gentlemen and pedestrians," he says, "I won't take up your valuable time with meaningless words. But let me make this one suggestion. With your kind cooperation we may untangle this mess."

Of course, nothing like this ever happened. But it might next year. And here's the reason. Policemen—70 of them—are going to take a course in public speaking.

Classes will begin Monday, and graduates will be turned loose to demonstrate their learned powers of oration on an unsuspecting public.

These policemen, all holders of certificates from last year's course in evidence and procedure at Columbus University, will learn other things, too. Augmenting the speaking course will be various special subjects, and police officials themselves will turn professors to teach.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, will conduct a class in "Police Administration and Traffic."

Inspector Louis I. H. Edwards, department executive officer, will lecture on "Records and Statistics."

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, detective chief, will offer pointers on "Relations With Citizens and Applied Criminology."

Detective Sergt. Viggor Larsen will instruct in "Fingerprints."

The teaching staff also will include officials of the Bureau of Standards, Secret Service, United States Postal Inspection Service and the Civil Service Commission.

A new class of 100 policemen, under direction of Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, dean of Columbus University, will begin the evidence and procedure course October 23.

All classes will be held at Columbus University, supervised by Dean Fitzpatrick.

Bulkley Sees New Inflation A Possibility

By Elliott Thurston.

The specter of further monetary manipulation, which so often has chilled the banking-business world, popped up again yesterday at the White House, unexpectedly—and, it seems, inadvertently.

First, Prof. George F. Warren, symbol for all the Administration's monetary works which are heretical in the eyes of the orthodox, threw off his cloak of invisibility and lunched for half an hour with President Roosevelt.

Then Senator Bulkley, of Ohio, went into conference with the President and emerged to tell the press, reluctantly, that further devaluation of the dollar is not an "impossibility."

Coming on top of Mr. Roosevelt's rather casual disclosure of Wednesday that he feels the price level should be raised somewhat more—how much, he did not profess to say—the visits of these two callers inevitably served to resurrect the specter which had been fading out to the deep relief of the business-banking community.

Signs Point to Inflation.

The stock and commodity markets exhibited fresh inflationary symptoms—though whether because of the professor's call and the Senator's comments no man can say. Anyway, it was so easy to add up Mr. Roosevelt's desire for higher prices, plus Prof. Warren's gold manipulation short-cut to higher prices, plus the Senator's seeming hint, that another jiggling of the gold content was not to be ruled out of the picture.

Things are not what they seem, however, by such simple addition—if authoritative White House explanations are accepted. For, it is said, the long-absent Prof. Warren has been tryin for three weeks to get in to see the President, who has been too busy to see him—too busy and also aware that the professor is the sort of talker who goes on for half an hour before coming to a full stop. Mr. Roosevelt decided finally to have the professor in at luncheon. He could talk while Mr. Roosevelt ate.

So the professor came in and delivered what is described as an interesting travelogue covering his recent journeyings to England and the continent where, at Baden-Baden, he sat in at an agricultural conference. The subject of gold, according to this explanation, was not mentioned—save indirectly as the professor's previous manipulations had made it costly for Americans to travel abroad.

As for the Senator, his true mission to the White House was, not surprisingly, political. He came down to see what he could do about having former Congressman Charles West of Ohio appointed Director of the Budget in place of Lewis W. Douglas, resigned. The Administration owes something to Mr. West, or so Mr. West feels, for he was induced to give up his seat in the

'Judge' C. R. Crisp Suffers a Stroke

Former Representative Is 'Resting Comfortably.'

After suffering a "mild stroke," former Representative Charles R. Crisp, of Georgia, was removed from his office in the Transportation Building to his home in the Highlands Apartments yesterday morning.

The 63-year-old attorney, who served 20 years in the House of Representatives, was reported to be resting comfortably by his physician, Dr. Sterling Ruffin.

"Judge" Crisp, so called because he once served as city court judge in the town of Americus, Ga., went to his office apparently in good health yesterday morning.

Ambassador Saito Sails To Resume Duties Here

Yokohama, Japan, Oct. 11 (AP).—Hirosi Saito sailed today for Washington to resume his duties as Japanese Ambassador to the United States.

Saito said, "We can no longer endure to be ranked inferior to other powers in naval matters."

He expressed confidence that "when Japan's new naval limitations proposals are announced at London shortly Americans will be convinced of their fairness and justice."

Hundreds Hunt Officer Missing With Prisoners

McAllen, Tex., Oct. 11 (AP).—More than 500 men joined today in the search for Jack Rapp, missing Hidalgo County sheriff, who disappeared yesterday while transporting three prisoners to Edinburg.

Border patrolmen, immigration officers, customs service men and scores of legionnaires were among the searchers who took up the search. Two planes were pressed into service to circle the area where Rapp disappeared.

Slavs Assault Italian Attache; Anti-Hungarian Riots Flare; Crisis Upsets French Cabinet

Sarraut Resigns After Criticism of Police for Laxity.

Secret Police Seek Big Terrorist Ring

Two Suspects Grilled; Boy King on Way to Belgrade.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Paris, Oct. 11.—A "vast international terrorist ring" was trailed by French secret police today, as Minister of Interior Albert Sarraut resigned after sharp criticism of police failure to protect King Alexander at Marseille Tuesday.

That the ten shots Petrus Kalemen fired still echoed through Europe was evidenced when Yugoslavs staged anti-Italian riots and French political observers confidently predicted Premier Gaston Doumergue's entire cabinet would resign for reorganization.

Terrorists Blamed.

French police were convinced an international terror outfit was back of Alexander's assassination. Officials of the Surete Nationale announced they were steadily drawing the net around suspected accomplices of Kalemen.

A chain of evidence already in the hands of police led them to believe they would be able to solve the murder of the Yugoslav King.

At Annemasse, France, police grilled two men—Ivan Rajtich alias Wladislav Benes, and Yaroslav Novak, who said they were born on territory then Austrian, but now Italian—believing they were accomplices of Kalemen.

The Surete Generale said Rajtich, who later admitted under questioning that he was born at Kolindinet, Yugoslavia, was shown Kalemen's picture and admitted meeting him in Paris, although asserting he did not know who he was but met him through a stranger.

It was stated that Rajtich and Novak had been traced to hotels in Versailles, where they apparently were ready to come to Paris at a moment's notice. Kalemen, it was pointed out, also stayed outside Marseille, at Aix-en-Provence.

At Marseille lay the bruised body of the murderer, whose death-dealing instrument—a new type of machine-gun pistol, capable of firing 280 shots a minute—took the lives of Alexander, Barthou and two other persons and resulted in his own summary execution.

Another Is Sought.

The real identity of the man still was a mystery, although Annemasse police were convinced the two men they question knew Kalemen and were linked with Balkin terrorists.

In the forest of Fontainebleau armed posses of gendarmes and

4 Killed, 18 Injured, In Iowa Train Wreck

Guttenberg, Iowa, Oct. 11 (AP).—Casualties resulting from the wreck of a speeding Milwaukee passenger train, which early today plunged off the rails into a creek bed, were 4 dead and 18 injured.

The dead were Charles Strazinsky, 66, engineer; Frank Mann, 55, fireman, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ruprecht, passengers, all of Dubuque.

State NRA Act Upheld In West Virginia Court

Beckley, W. Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—The West Virginia law designed to enforce NRA codes within the State was held constitutional today by Judge C. M. Ward in Raleigh County Circuit Court. The decision was contrary to an opinion by Judge Beno F. Howard, of the McDowell County Circuit Court, who held the law unconstitutional two weeks ago.

Judge Ward issued an order temporarily restraining D. D. Furrow, an automobile dealer, from violating the code of fair competition for motor vehicle retail dealers.

U. S. to Drop Case Against Houde Firm

Defiance of Collective Bargaining Rule Not to Be Prosecuted.

By James D. Secrest.

The whole question of the attitude of the Administration toward collective bargaining as guaranteed in section 7(a) of the National industrial recovery act was thrown into confusion yesterday when the Department of Justice announced that it would not prosecute the Houde Engineering Co., of Buffalo, N. Y.

An informal announcement by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings at a press conference threw a bombshell in labor circles and the offices of the National Labor Relations Board, which had demanded the prosecution.

"No immediate action in the Houde case is contemplated," Cummings said, "and the National Labor Relations Board understands our position."

Smith Is Surprised.

The decision came as a surprise, however, to Edwin S. Smith, a member of the board, and other officials who had been associated with the case.

Lloyd K. Garrison, chairman of the Labor Board, refused to comment on the Attorney General's an-

Battle Likely On Licensing Of Air Units

More Than Threescore Applications Before Federal Board.

A spectacular fight before the Federal Communications Commission is expected shortly over proposed licensing of more than threescore new radio stations.

It is an open secret in radio circles that the commission plans to proceed cautiously in acting on the flood of applications for licenses because of the potential political influence which could be exercised by the stations.

Another element entering into the situation is the fact that all of the commissioners are serving under recess appointments and must be confirmed by the Senate at the next session of Congress.

All of the stations involved would be 100-watt power, which would give an average radius of 8 or 10 miles to the programs they broadcast. Although the soft-pedal has been applied in official quarters, Republican leaders probably will raise the issue of whether broadcasting outlets licensed under the Roosevelt Administration would be prone to be generous in alloting time on the air to Democratic speakers.

The commission announced station construction permits, tantamount to operating licenses, had

King George Spurns Appeal To Aid Carol's Reconciliation

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—All hope of reconciliation between King Carol of Rumania and his former wife, Princess Helen, was abandoned today when it was learned King George had refused the pleas of Carol's mother to intervene.

The Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania left for France yesterday, accompanying Yugoslavia's 11-year-old King Peter, having failed in her mission to convince King George the time was come to forgive Carol for his indiscretions.

One of the main objects of Marie's visit to London was understood to have been to pave the way for a reconciliation between Carol and Helen. To accomplish this the Queen felt the British monarch must first be won over, so that Carol and Helen might be invited to the wedding of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina at London next month.

King George, however, was understood to have maintained a stern attitude toward Carol, frankly telling Queen Marie that her son, by continuing to maintain his friendship with Mme. Magda Lupescu, was not only undermining the Rumanian dynasty, but causing his country irreparable harm and casting discredit directly upon the other royal houses to whom he is related.

The King was said to have taken occasion to assert that Carol's harsh treatment of Helen, for whom the British ruler is known to have a high regard and deep sympathy, was nothing short of scandalous.

Queen Marie was said to have wept as she told King George of her own situation and the plight of Rumania in the light of the anomalous situation created by King Carol.

Regency Takes Helm, New Government to Be Formed.

'No Mistake in Me,' Says Prince Paul

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Oct. 11.—Riotous demonstrations against Italy and Hungary occurred today in various cities of Yugoslavia, while Prince Paul Karageorgevitch, in a solemn ceremony, accepted the task of governing the nation in the name of 11-year-old King Peter II.

Melees occurred at Laibach and Subotich, and in the former city the secretary of the Italian consulate was beaten before police rescued him. His injuries were not serious.

On the Hungarian border, anti-Hungarian demonstrations were staged. A crowd, brandishing clubs, entered the building of the Hungarian newspaper "Napolo" and set the furniture afire. Firemen drove the crowd out and extinguished the flames.

The incident at Laibach was provoked when the crowd began shouting insults to Italy, near the consulate. The Italian attache passed and replied to the crowd; instantly he was set upon, but police fought their way into the crowd and rescued him.

The entire Yugoslavian cabinet handed a collective resignation to the three regents, headed by Prince Paul, at 11 a. m. The prince requested them to continue in office until a new government is formed, probably directly after Alexander's funeral Wednesday.

Prince Paul and his colleagues took the oath of allegience to King Peter and the nation in the Parliament Building. In accepting the great duty, which makes him the virtual ruler of Yugoslavia until Peter II comes of age, Paul said simply, "I think you will make no mistake in me."

The prince thanked the Parliament and said he hoped the regency would not abuse their confidence or hopes. The deputies thereupon applauded, indicating the regency is a popular choice.

Members of the opposition to the government, not represented in Parliament, met today and decided that for the present they would take no steps to combat the regime, declaring a virtual truce until after Alexander's funeral.

Dr. A. Merriam Drowned Here

Public Health Surgeon Fell From Launch Into Potomac.

Falling overboard from a launch on the Potomac River near the Army War College, Dr. Arthur C. Merriam, of 5009 Fourteenth street northwest, surgeon of the Bureau of Public Health, was drowned yesterday afternoon at 5:45 o'clock.

Brought to the District Morgue, he was pronounced dead by Dr. Joseph M. Becker of the Emergency Hospital.

Jail Term Enjoyable To Missouri Lawyer

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Oct. 11 (AP).—Kenrick Burrough, 43-year-old Cape Girardeau attorney, is carrying on his legal business from a cell in the county jail here, while he serves a 60-day sentence for contempt of court. "I'm enjoying a vacation here in jail," he said today.

Burrough refused to discuss his differences with United States District Judge C. B. Faris, which led to the contempt sentence.

Seems Like Hot Time On the Flying Trapeze

Kansas City, Oct. 11 (AP).—Miss Tarzana Nichols, a trapeze performer, appeared at a hospital today and asked for an X-ray examination because she believed she had swallowed her wrist watch.

Miss Nichols said she occasionally places valuables in her mouth at night for safekeeping. She said she thought of the timepiece, missing since Saturday, when she had pains in her stomach today. The X-ray failed to show the watch.

Delay Granted On Extradition Of Hauptmann

Over the objections of New Jersey prosecutors, Supreme Court Justice Ernest E. L. Hammer, of the Bronx granted the petition of Defense Attorney James M. Fawcett for a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus.

The jurist fixed Monday at 11 a. m. to hear Hauptmann's denial of the allegations he went to Hopewell the night of March 1, 1932; that he snatched baby Lindbergh from his nursery crib; that as a result of this kidnaping, the flier's first-born died.

Bronx Trial Put Off.

With the opening of the Bronx court, District Attorney Samuel Foley went before County Judge James M. Barrett and wiped from the calendar the trial of Hauptmann on the charge of extorting $50,000 ransom from Col. Lindbergh. The trial was scheduled to start today.

Judge Barrett then vacated the $100,000 bail against the German former convict. For a moment, then, Hauptmann was at liberty. But it was a moment of liberty of which he could not take advantage. For surrounding him, as he stood before Judge Barrett were six deputy sheriffs, six New York City police, Capt. John J. Lamb, of the Jersey police, and several Department of Justice agents.

Hauptmann Pale.

It was Hauptmann's fourth appearance in court since his arrest three weeks ago. His face was pallid and he wore the same gray suit as on the day of his arrest. His shirt was open at the collar. His face was freshly shaved.

As on the other occasions, he seemed to stare into space. His lips were set tight. He seemed to be dazed.

No sooner had Judge Barrett vacated the bail—thus holding in abeyance the extortion indictment until trial of the more serious charges in New Jersey—than a detective stepped up to Hauptmann and served him with the extradition warrant, signed by Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey and honored yesterday by Gov. Herbert Lehman. The warrant charged Hauptmann with being a fugitive from New Jersey justice.

New Jersey Objects.

As Hauptmann was led back to jail, Fawcett went before Supreme Court Justice Hammer. Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey, his assistant, Joseph Lanigan, and District Attorney Foley talked for 20 minutes in the judge's chambers with Hammer and Fawcett.

It was learned later that New Jersey prosecutors objected strongly to the delay.

In resorting to extraordinary legal remedy, Fawcett at the habeas corpus hearing will be allowed to present testimony on which Hauptmann will attempt to establish an alibi.

Mrs. Hauptmann will testify at the hearing, Fawcett said, that she was with her husband on the night of the crime, miles away from the Sourland Mountain home of the Lindberghs.

In all, Fawcett said, "there will be six or seven witnesses."

New Jersey will present as much of its evidence as its prosecutors deem necessary to counter any alibi.

District Attorney Foley said Attorney General Wilentz of New Jersey and his aids would be in charge at Monday's hearing.

With extradition, Hauptmann will be taken to the small jail of Hunterdon County, at Flemington—where the indictment charging him with the murder was returned last Monday.

Defense Speeded In Poisoning Case

Bell and Miss Irma Bell, take a short automobile ride today.

Bell's arrest followed examination in Richmond of foods, served to Mrs. Bell, suspected of being purposely adulterated. Doctors and nurses had grown suspicious because of symptoms of internal poisoning. Tests disclosed the foods, the State is expected to claim, contained small quantities of poison.

Personal feelings toward the well-known and popular family caused officials and others intimately connected with details to be extremely reticent. W. B. F. Cole, Fredericksburg prosecuting attorney, withdrew from the case because of his relationship to Dr. John Cole, the family physician. The men are brothers.

Bell is a deacon in the Fredericksburg Baptist Church, and was formerly Sunday school superintendent. He is a prominent furniture dealer, has been active in civic affairs and is a member of the city Democratic committee.

W. B. F. Cole will probably figure as a witness in the case, according to a letter addressed to Judge Coleman, in which the prosecuting attorney said, "It is also probable that I will be a necessary witness."

Smart Resigns Post In Self-Help Colony

Morgantown, W. Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Ornan B. Smart, general manager of the Government-sponsored subsistence homestead project at Reedsville, W. Va., announced today he has resigned, effective Saturday.

He will return to Washington as assistant to Howard T. Gray, the director of inspection in the Public Works Administration.

Between You and Me

Administration and Al Smith 'Make Up;' Soap Lake Interests Roosevelt.

By Raymond Clapper

Everything is friendly again between the Administration and Al Smith. They have buried the hatchet.

The hermit of the Empire State Tower and Postmaster General Farley met at the Democratic State convention in Buffalo recently. They got along together for the first time since Roosevelt was nominated over Smith's opposition, both being interested in the reelection of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman. As a close friend of both, Lehman is credited with having helped thaw out the frost.

When Smith, having hauled his brown derby out of the moth balls, rose in the convention to place Gov. Lehman in nomination, he took every opportunity to praise the record of Roosevelt as Governor of New York.

It would not be surprising here if, before the campaign is over, Smith would be invited to the White House. A reunion between these two favorite sons of New York would be the most spectacular thing of that kind since the famous reconciliation between Theodore Roosevelt and Taft, after their 1912 fight.

Smith's pungent snorting about "baloney dollars" and his other passes at Administration policy have done much to wean conservative business support away from the Administration.

* * * *

Personal sympathies arising out of his own search for health at Warm Springs, Ga., were awakened in President Roosevelt yesterday by an appeal to provide treatment for veterans in the strange waters of Soap Lake, a small pond on the desert in Washington State, not far from the Grand Coulee Dam site. The appeal was brought by Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Democratic candidate for the Senate in Washington State.

In experiments on ten veterans suffering from a gangrenous-like affliction, eight were benefited. But Veterans' Administration physicians insisted before and after the experiment that the water of Soap Lake had nothing to do with the healing.

Previously a veteran had brought a jug of water, which is somewhat soapy due to chemical content, to the White House. President Roosevelt was much interested. He also stopped to view the lake while inspecting Grand Coulee Dam foundations last summer. Furthermore, when he began his own Warm Springs treatment after the infantile paralysis attack several years ago, it was in the face of some skepticism in the medical profession.

As a result of this personal interest, it is expected that a way will be found to continue treatment of veterans at Soap Lake.

After some delay, the last words of the assassinated King Alexander have been given to the public, and in two versions. His foreign minister, who was at the scene, relates that the bullet-riddled monarch roused himself sufficiently to gasp, "Guard Franco-Yugoslavian friendship." The Yugoslavian government, in its proclamation, quoted the last words as "Guard Yugoslavia."

Last words of the great frequently have a synthetic ring. Often they sound like ghost writing by survivors interested in building a legend.

The only last words which seemed to ring true to me were those of John Burroughs, the naturalist. Edward Angly, as an Associated Press reporter, was assigned to meet the New York-bound train on which the rugged old philosopher of nature had died. On the train was the naturalist's biographer, Dr. Clara Barrus. Young Angly scurried through the train and found her.

"What were Mr. Burroughs' last words?" he asked.

She was reluctant.

"I really don't think I ought to say," she replied between sobs. Reporter Angly was not discouraged by that and finally, after much obvious doubt, the lady relented.

"If you must know," she said, "the last thing Mr. Burroughs said was 'turn me over and rub the other side.'"

It begins to look as if Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, will be too busy helping the party in other States to give much time to the campaign in his own State, where Upton Sinclair is the Democratic candidate for Governor. He has been asked to help the Democratic Senatorial committee in five other States and, considering the possible embarrassments of mixing too energetically in the Sinclair campaign at home, Senator McAdoo is glad to oblige. Still, if they insist, he will make a speech or two for the EPIC candidate.

Princess Regains U. S. Citizenship

in a brief ceremony, she became a naturalized American citizen.

Mrs. Cantacuzene, whose brother is Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, who until recently served here as director of Public Buildings and Public Parks, lost her American birthright on September 25, 1899, when she was married at Newport, R. I.

Her wedding there to the Maj. Gen. Prince Cantacuzene—Count Speransky was one of the outstanding marriages of the nineties. The princess went to Russia with her husband and became a Russian citizen.

Since the war and the Russian revolution the Princess has been an American citizen in fact if not in law. She lived for several years in Florida and recently established her permanent home at 2029 Connecticut avenue here.

The princess could not be reached to comment upon her decision to become a citizen of the United States again. At present she is living at the Sulgrave Club, 1801 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Julia Dent Grant, the princess' name before her marriage, was born at the White House on June 7, 1876. Her father was Maj. Gen. Frederick D. Grant.

Patron of Emigrants.

Princess Cantacuzene has lived through halcyon days and dark days, knowing the magnificence of the court of Czar Nicholas in its greatest glory and then seeing it obliterated under the red badge of revolution.

The princess has not forgotten Russia. She is the patron of a little group of Russian emigrants who call themselves the Russian Veteran Society of the World War, who, like her, lost their old life in the bloody days of 1917.

Mrs. Cantacuzene, who has three daughters, has made her life famous in three books: "Revolutionary Days," "Russian People", and "My Life Here and There."

Crippled Air Liner Lands, 9 Aboard Safe

Chicago, Oct. 11 (AP).—A United air liner from the West Coast, with nine passengers aboard, was landed at its airport safely today after the pilot, J. A. Smith, of Seattle, was compelled to circle the field for 20 minutes because the landing wheels could not be completely lowered.

His big ship kicked up a lot of dust as Smith brought it to the ground, but none of the passengers were hurt, nor was there any apparent damage done to the plane.

Liquor Imports Rise, Wine at Repeal Low

While September imports of liquor were 10.1 per cent greater than for August, less wine was brought into the United States last month than at any time since repeal, the Treasury announced yesterday.

The drop in the Cuban rum duty because of the reciprocity treaty, effective September 4, doubled imports from the island.

Mistrial in Sapiro Case.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Federal Judge Johnson C. Hayes today declared a mistrial in the case of Aaron Sapiro, New York and Chicago attorney, and Sam Roth, indicted for allegedly attempting to corrupt jurymen and for conspiracy.

(Associated Press.)

Speedy prosecution of new oil code violations is the next step before the Government in its campaign to eliminate alleged illegal oil production in east Texas.

Aroused by reports that about 125,000 barrels of "hot" oil are bubbling daily out of east Texas, Secretary Ickes sat down yesterday with Attorney General Cummings to map a program of "vigorous prosecutions" of producers in the area who may be ignoring the oil code.

The price situation stood out yesterday as one of the major issues confronting the industry.

Apparently from well-informed quarters, reports were heard that a cut of as much as 30 per cent in the price of crude may be expected within a few days. Some say the reduction, which would place crude at about 70 cents a barrel, is a matter of hours only.

Committee discussions of code revisions were reported yesterday to be revolving primarily around marketing and refinery sections. There has been criticism of the former in some volume, while the latter have been unpopular with refiners although they are said to be functioning with a greater degree of satisfaction than the marketing provisions.

Ickes said some of the anticipated prosecution cases were "very good ones." Their basis is evidence uncovered by Louis R. Glavis, the Secretary's chief investigator; Charles Fahy, vice chairman of the petroleum administrative board, and James H. Marshall, board member.

Storms Slow Ship Bearing Monarch; May Delay Rites

Split, Yugoslavia, Oct. 11 (AP).—Storms and high seas delaying progress of the destroyer Dubrovnik, bearing the body of the martyred King Alexander back to his homeland, today caused fears that the warship could not reach here before Sunday.

Should the ship's arrival be delayed, the state funeral ceremonies at Belgrade originally planned for Wednesday will be postponed until Thursday, it was believed.

Horween, Football Star, Will Be Aid to Ickes

Ralph Horween, whose exploits in the Harvard back field 15 years ago are still recalled by football fans, yesterday was appointed by Secretary of Interior Ickes, the oil administrator, as executive assistant for oil.

Horween played half back for Harvard in 1915 and 1916, returning in 1919 after active duty as a lieutenant in the Navy during the war. He practiced law in Chicago before being appointed last January as attorney for the Petroleum Administrative Board.

Bulkley Holds New Inflation A Possibility

House, to which he could have been readily reelected, in order to become the Administration's candidate for the Senate in Ohio. This was arranged last summer after Senator Bulkley and former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio had talked it all over with Mr. Roosevelt. Thereupon, Mr. West was projected in Ohio as the New Deal's favorite. Gov. Cox issued a statement to that effect, adding that former Gov. Vic Donahey, who had his eye on the Senate, was "not in sympathy" with the New Deal.

Bases Claim on Service.

Unhappily for Mr. West, Vic Donahey won easily in the Democratic primary. Thus the Administration was left in the position of having lured Mr. West out into the jobless cold. On such a basis, plus his loyalty, service, record, &c., rests the claim of Mr. West for the job of budget director.

However, when the former Representative's advocate, Senator Bulkley, came out of the Presidential office he neglected to mention the political mission. Under high pressure from White House correspondents, who surrounded him, he was drawn into saying cautiously, but nevertheless saying, that further devaluation of the dollar is a possibility, though he does not favor it and sees no occasion for it at this time. He has said as much before. Saying it yesterday, however, innocent as the comment is by itself, seemed portentous.

When that was explained to the Senator later in the day, he made haste to say that he had not discussed any such matter as gold manipulations with the President, and that the President had said nothing to him about another try at jugglery of the gold content.

As for Prof. Warren, who is as unrevealing with the prass as he is communicative with the President, he certainly was not guilty of raising the specter by words. His mere presence, after long absence, which seemed very much like exile, was enough for that. Before retreating to his cubby-hole office in the remote reaches of the Commerce Department Building, the professor, encircled by the press, said only:

"No comment to make."

Professorial Viewpoint.

The press-versus-professor dialogue continued thus:

"How did you find things in England?"

"Conditions there are quite cheerful. It's the one bright spot in Europe today. However, some of the Scandinavian countries are coming along. Continental Europe is still deep in the depression."

"Is France going to stay on the gold standard?"

"I wish I knew."

"Are you rejoining the brain trust?"

"I've never been initiated."

"Are you reopening your office?"

"It's never been closed so far as I know."

With that the professor escaped, putting on as he went, it seemed, his cloak of invisibility.

The Senator's cross-examination, on analysis, was not much more specific. He said he approved of the President's desire to raise the price level. They had discussed monetary matters, relief and housing, he said.

Sees Continuance of Relief.

"I do not see much chance of reducing expenditures for relief," he told a questioner. I do not think the burden will be lightened right away. That doesn't mean employment conditions are not getting better. They are. But with the prolongation of the depression more and more have reached the end of their resources. There must be a still further upgrade in employment before relief expenditures can be reduced." Then he added that he thought the housing program could be expanded, but preferred to await the opening of Congress before deciding if further legislation is needed.

That was all. More shadow than substance to the specter—but another time the White House appointment-makers will not have Prof. Warren in for lunch coincident with a more or less casual Presidential talk on prices. The combination causes jitters among people for whom the New Deal is prescribing soothing syrup.

Mexico Persists As Anti-Church

Socialistic Education Also to Be Instituted.

Mexico City, Oct. 11 (AP).—Despite increasing opposition, the government has made known it intends to institute socialistic education in all secondary schools in the country and continue its strict anti-church attitude.

Combined with sporadic uprising by small groups of armed men, the student and religious agitation is seen by many as presenting a serious problem. But the government apparently feels there is no need as yet for energetic action to check it.

Student feeling against making socialistic education compulsory in all schools except universities has been exhibited in Monterey, Zacatecas and in Mexico City.

Princeton Reinstates 2 Ousted for Beer Party

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 11 (AP)—The affair of the dormitory beer-drinking political rally was formally closed on Princeton's campus today with the reinstatement of two university seniors, Edward F. Prichard, jr., of Paris, and Kelvin M. Fox, of Flagstaff, Ariz.

The students were suspended for serving two kegs of beer at a dormitory political rally attended by 60 students without obtaining permission of the dean.

Mystery Man Gives Clew to His Identity

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 11 (AP).—The belief that an unidentified white man found wandering in the Harness Creek section, unable to talk or write, lives in or near Marion, S. C., was expressed today by Anne Arundel County authorities. The man, when shown a map and asked to indicate his home, drew a circle around Marion, S. C. Sheriff R. Glenn Prout today communicated with the Marion police

Dr. J. J. Murphy, jail physician, declared the man is mentally sound, but has been paralyzed so that he can not talk or write. From marks made by him, Deputy Hawkins believes his name is Garner.

Battle Is Likely Over Licensing In Radio Field

Hearings were ordered on the applications of 19 stations, while 47 other applications remained pending and probably will be set for hearings. The purpose of the investigations will be to decide whether the proposed facilities would "serve the public convenience, interest or necessity," and whether they would interfere with stations already licensed.

Allocation of air privileges to new stations in wholesale numbers would represent a departure from the policy of the old Federal Radio Commission, under which the total number of stations in the country was reduced from 734 in 1927 to 599 in 1933.

Meanwhile, the commission continued hearings on proposals to set aside a greater percentage of broadcasting facilities to nonprofit organizations, such as educational institutions.

Philip G. Loucks, representing the National Association of Broadcasters, protested any change in the present system would be "undesirable from the standpoint of the public and disastrous from the standpoint of broadcasters and the vast majority of all religious, educational, charitable, civic and other similar organizations."

Testifies on Air Service.

Henry A. Bellows, chairman of the association's legislative committee, testified existing commercial stations already were affording "an enormous variety of service" to "a great number of institutions and organizations."

Most of the commercial stations, he insisted, would be willing to sacrifice financial returns if necessary to raise the standards of their programs.

Applicants for new licenses who have been granted hearings include Great Western Broadcasting Association, Logan, Utah; American Broadcasting Co., Washington; Winger & Thomas, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Albert T. Roche and Harold Smithson, Chico, Calif.; Brown Radio Service and Laboratory, Rochester, N. Y.; Guthrie Broadcasting Co., Guthrie, Okla.; Joseph H. Hallock, Baker, Oreg.; Guilford Broadcasting Co., Abilene, Tex.; Raymond L. Hughes, Midland, Tex.; W. C. Hilgedick and George C. Knaur, Denison, Tex.; T. H. Barton, El Dorado, Ark.; W. L. Gleeson, Salinas, Calif.; A. H. Sconberg, Salinas, Calif.; Palmer Broadcasting Syndicate, Portland, Me.; Palmer Broadcasting Syndicate, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Willis T. Shaughnessy, Bay Shore, N. Y.; Great Western Broadcasting Association, Provo, Utah.; Louis H. Callister, Provo, Utah, and Paul Q. Callister, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Radio Commission To Rule if 'Damn' Profanes the Air

A weakness of radio speakers for using the word "damn" was brought to the attention of the Federal Communications Commission yesterday.

Henry A. Bellows, of the National Association of Broadcasters, said station owners were "jittery" over just what constituted profanity, which is not permitted on the air.

He suggested passage by Congress of a law relieving broadcasters of responsibility for whatever is said over their stations.

U. S. Will Drop Charge Against Houde Concern

Defiance of Collective Bargaining Rule Not to Be Prosecuted.

nouncement. Garrison, who recently tendered his resignation to return as dean of the law school of the University of Wisconsin, has handled the negotiations with the Justice Department.

It was learned on good authority, however, that Garrison believed that the case may still be taken to the courts, perhaps through the furnishing of additional evidence which the Justice Department feels is necessary to make the suit stand up.

The attitude of the Justice Department raised the question of whether the refusal to prosecute the Houde Co. was more in accord with the views of President Roosevelt than had been the board's decision.

It was recalled that the President last spring had approved in principle an agreement in a threatened automobile strike whereby representation of rival unions was provided on a pro rata membership basis.

The decision also recalled the department's refusal to prosecute the Harriman (Tenn.) Hosiery Mills on charges of violation of labor sections of the recovery act preferred by the then Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

Whether the case was dropped by the Justice Department on a technicality or because of a sharp difference in interpretation of the collective bargaining clause was not made clear.

Justice officials made it clear, however, that the evidence against the company was held not sufficient to form the basis of a suit in equity as requested by the Labor Board.

Order to Houde Firm.

In what has been widely recognized as the most significant decision yet rendered by the Labor Board, the Houde Co. on August 30 was ordered to recognize the United Automobile Workers Federal Union, No. 18839, as the exclusive agency of the employes for collective bargaining.

The board further found the company had violated section 7(a) by "interfering with the self-organization of its employes, impairing their rights of collective bargaining and refusing to bargain collectively within the meaning of that section."

The Houde Co. was given ten days to comply with the decision before the board referred the case to the NRA compliance division and the Justice Department "for appropriate action."

After some delay the NRA compliance division ordered the company to remove its Blue Eagle. This the company refused to do, and the NRA countered with a warning that if the Blue Eagle were displayed prosecution would follow.

Immediately after the labor board announced its decision Houde officials issued a defiant refusal to abide by it, stating:

"The opinion of the Labor Board lays down conclusions of law and rules of action that violate the constitutional rights of the company and of its employes and are directly contrary to the decisions of the highest courts of the land and the principles of law and the Constitution."

Concern's Stand.

The Houde Co. stated, as it had to the board, that it would bargain either with both the American Federation of Labor representatives and the representatives of the Houde Welfare and Athletic Association, a company union, or with each separately.

The Labor Board held that the company is bound to deal only with the A. F. of L. delegates as the employes by a vote of 1,105 to 647 elected the union representatives to bargain collectively with their employers under section 7(a).

At the Justice Department it was said that an examination of the facts uncovered no evidence of any refusal upon the part of the company to bargain collectively and that not only had the company never refused to bargain collectively, but had never been asked.

This was in direct contrast with the contention of the Labor Board, as stated in its decision.

Moreover, the board went beyond the mere question of a meeting between the union representativs and the employers and laid down a broad policy that was intended to govern similar cases in the future.

Board Statement.

"Collective bargaining is simply a means to an end," the board said. "The end is an agreement. And, customarily, such an agreement will have to do with wages, hours and basic working conditions, and will have a fixed duration."

Since the election, the board stated, the company's practice has been to meet every week or two, first with the association's committee and then with the union committee, or vice versa. At these meetings, it added, only matters of secondary importance were discussed.

"It seems clear that the company's policy of dealing first with one group and then with the other, resulted, whether intentionally or not, in defeating the objects of the statute," the board stated.

Further on, the board said that this policy "clearly prevented any arrival at collective agreements in the sense intended by the statute.

Pensions to Aid Mothers Urged By Labor Vote

Federation Recommends That Aged Also Be Compensated.

San Francisco, Oct. 11 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor convention today voted unanimous support of mothers' pensions for dependent children, old age pension laws and sickness and unemployment compensation measures.

At the same time the federation refused again to favor the formation of a labor political party in the United States.

The Federation rejected a plea by Hugh Ernst, of the hotel and restaurant employes union, that "the time has come when labor needs to organize along political as well as economic lines.

A viva voce vote was taken on the question and President William Green ruled the convention rejected the idea, as in previous years, although many dissenting voices were heard.

The convention also heard John Frey of Washington, secretary of the A. F. of L. resolutions committee, declare the economic welfare of the country "depends more on an even distribution through wages of the new economic wealth created than on anything else."

Fair Competition Urged.

Establishment of an international code of fair competition, Dr. Harold E. Butler, of Geneva, director of the international labor office, told the meeting, is necessary to bring about world industrial recovery.

The executive council's report regarding dependent children, old age, sickness and compensation for workers without jobs, sections of which were unanimously opposed by the convention, said:

"Our emergency relief program would be simpler if we had adequate provisions for mothers' pensions.

"Mothers' pension laws exist in 46 States, but they are obviously inadequate in coverage and provisions. We should endeavor to improve these laws and secure the enactment of the best standards in all States and Territories."

Concerning old-age pension measures, the council's report said, in part:

"We find that in October, 1933, nearly half a million persons over 65 years were in receipt of emergency unemployment relief. This figure represents only a small proportion of the dependent aged. * * *

Old-Age Pensions Backed.

"A number of more or less inadequate provisions which have been established for the older groups—military pensions, union old-age benefits, industrial pensions—provide incomes for a portion; benevolent homes, church homes, union homes, poorhouses provide subsistence for others. * * *

"Old-age pension laws exist in 28 States. The American Federation of Labor has long advocated compensation for those past 65 years of age. We believe efforts should be concentrated on securing Nation-wide legislation to provide adequately for this group in the direction already suggested by State enactment, often the result of trade union efforts."

Adequate provisions also should be made, the council reported, for caring for the sick and those without work. These sections of the report also were approved.

Frey outlined the opposition of labor leaders toward any scheme of basing wages on the fluctuating cost of living.

"I want to stress the importance of wages to the economic health of the Nation," he said. "The depression is due more than anything else to the unsound basis of wages.

"The economic welfare of the country depends more on an even distribution through wages of the new economic wealth created, than it does on anything else.

"If wages are not made sufficient to give the workers the power to buy a larger part of the goods they produce, all other efforts to get us out of this depression will be of no use."

The recognition of Russia by the United States was attacked in a speech by Chauncey Weaver, a delegate of the musicians union.

Weaver declared communistic activities had increased because of the recognition, describing it as "the most indefensible, asinine action any government ever pulled off."

Although still confronted by numerous resolutions, the convention hoped to end its fifty-fourth annual convention by Friday night.

Where Social Leader Was Beaten and Kidnaped

vided by Mrs. Fowler Woolet, 17, a maid, who was gagged and tied to a chair.

He was hatless, pale, with bright-red lips, between 30 and 35, about 5 feet 8 inches tall and wore a dark suit with pin stripes.

Information Withheld.

Simultaneous with the announcement of Harold Nathan, assistant director for the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, that his men would withdraw came a statement from the family that no further information would be given out.

"We are so anxious to negotiate for the safe return of Mrs. Stoll that we have decided to give out no more information," said George W. Stoll, brother-in-law of the victim.

These developments gave rise to a theory that some contact may have been made with the kidnaper during the day and that the stage was being cleared for Mrs. Stoll's return.

A new theory in the case was that the case was a crime of revenge.

Mrs. Woolet, a highly excitable woman, who wears thick-lens glasses, said the kidnaper cursed Mrs. Stoll as he struck her and muttered:

"Damn you rich—you'll get yours now."

Mrs. Stoll's father, William Shallcross Speed, was president of the National Bank of Kentucky, which failed some time ago.

The kidnaper gained entrance to the Stoll home by posing as a telephone inspector. After entering the house he jerked telephones from the walls and proceeded to bind and gag Mrs. Woolet and Mrs. Stoll.

Toll Charges Dropped On Potomac Bridges

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Toll charges on two bridges over the Potomac River maintained jointly by Virginia and Maryland have been discontinued, the State highway department announced today. The bridges both are in Loudoun County, Va., one crossing to Point of Rocks, Md., and the other to Brunswick, Md.

This leaves no toll bridge in the Virginia State highway system except the James Madison Memorial Bridge across the Rappahannock from Port Royal to Port Conway.

Butler Describes Rum Imbibing Of Mrs. Vanderbilt and Guests

'They Were Always Perfect Ladies and Gentlemen,' He Tells Court.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Dancing and drinking habits of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt's guests, and of the hostess as well, were described by her butler today behind the closed doors of the courtroom where a battle over the custody of 10-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt is being waged.

The testimony, as recounted later by Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew, contained nothing more damaging than that the butler had once seen Mrs. Vanderbilt take "one drink one morning before one breakfast."

"A lady," he answered, smiling.

Zaug, who is still butler at Mrs. Vanderbilts' home, said a number of people attended her parties and danced and drank until 1 or 2 a. m. Mrs. Vanderbilt's lawyer, cross-examining him, asked the butler if the guests weren't all "perfect ladies and gentlemen," and received the reply that they were.

Justice Carew said the butler had told nothing about "lots of drinking" or having to assist Mrs. Vanderbilt upstairs. Other servants have testified that Mrs. Vanderbilt was frequently intoxicated.

Because of other engagements by the lawyers, the case was adjourned until Monday. Interest was expected to center then in the arrival of Prince Gottfried Hohenlohe and the former Lady Furness, Mrs. Vanderbilt's twin sister, both witnesses for her.

Liquor Imports Rise During Past Month

Imports of liquor during September, according to preliminary figures just compiled, aggregated 345,157 gallons, an increase of 31,688 gallons, or 10.1 per cent, over the imports for the previous month, it was announced by the Bureau of Customs today.

The increase in September imports of distilled liquor marked the end of the steady decline in such imports since May, when an aggregate of 1,048 gallons was imported.

Eckener Bound Here To Plan Air Service

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Oct. 11 (AP).—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, said today that a regular North American-German Zeppelin passenger service was under consideration by United States officials. He left here today bound for New York, saying, "The purpose of my trip is to go to Washington and discuss a regular service between America and Germany."

He indicated that the proposed service would consist of two German and two American Zeppelins.

RFC Statistics Rebuke Critics Of U. S. Banks

Chided for Refusing Loans, but Federal Agency Does Likewise.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In two Administration quarters statistics were revealed yesterday indicating that much of the criticism directed at the banking community since the New Deal was inaugurated has not been justified.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, made public figures regarding applications for industrial loans under the Glass act, which appeared to indicate clearly that there was no ground last winter for charging the bankers with a refusal to lend funds needed by sound, good-risk business borrowers.

It was this criticism which resulted in the passage of the Glass loans-for-industry act. This act authorized the RFC to lend up to $300,000,000 to going industries for expansion purposes. Although the act became effective almost four months ago—and expires January 1—"only" 2,403 applications have been received, as Mr. Jones phrased it, for a total of $93,000,000—or less than one-third of the sum available.

Only 244 Approved.

But of the applications received, "only" 244 have been approved by the RFC for a total of $14,897,000. Of the RFC's total commitment on industrial loans, $2,375,000 has been disbursed.

Of the total applications received, 1,319 were rejected by the field agencies of the RFC as unsound risks or because the applicants were unable to qualify under the conditions set up by Congress and the RFC. The RFC board rejected 176 of the applications forwarded by the field agents, leaving 97 pending before the board.

When he was asked why the number of applications was so small and why so few had been approved, Mr. Jones, in his Texan drawl, replied: "I swear, I don't know."

In other quarters it was suggested that the Administration is finding out that with isolated exceptions, the banks choked with surplus funds have been anxious to make loans to solvent borrowers who can show some prospect of repaying, but that there has been a scarcity of such prospective borrowers.

Other Money Goes Begging.

The Glass act also authorized the Federal Reserve Banks to lend an aggregate of $280,000,000 to industrial borrowers direct. According to the Federal Reserve Board weekly report as of Wednesday, commitments to make industrial loans totaled $1,809,000, while "industrial adanvces" totaled $3,708,000. What effect that part of the act permitting the Reserve Banks to discount industrial paper with a maturity up to five years has had on loans by member banks can not be appraised because such figures are not available.

The other set of figures which were regarded as confounding critics of the bankers came from the Federal Reserve Board and related to the holdings of Government securities by banks. In his last fireside radio chat President Roosevelt, praising the British bankers for cooperating with their government in refinancing operations, intimated that the American bankers had not done all they could. From time to time the same contention has been made in New Deal circles.

Drug Plants Push Drives For Business

Advertising Is Increased in Efforts to Boost Income Share.

New York, Oct. 11.—In an effort to participate to a greater degree in gradually rising consumer incomes, proprietary drug manufacturers have greatly intensified promotional efforts through increased expenditures for advertising.

The majority of concerns in this field will spend considerably more for advertising this year than in 1933, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York.

Rather than indicating a more keenly competitive situation, this development is largely a corollary to generally improved economic conditions. With advertising expenditures in many cases geared closely to sales volumes, expanding sales are permitting more normal budget allotments for advertising.

Advertising Outlay View.

In other instances, companies that had curtailed such outlays considerably during the earlier years of the depression in an endeavor to maintain earnings are now redoubling their efforts.

Still others are attempting to reestablish a greater degree of public acceptance of individual lines.

Because of the nature of the product, manufacturers of packaged medicines are always heavily dependent upon consumer good will to maintain and expand their markets.

Sales and Advertising.

Even in normal times, approximately one-third of the average proprietary company's sales are spent for advertising.

Unrest Growing In Martinsburg

Mayor to Enforce 'Red Men's Act' in Labor Rows, He Says.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—The "Red Men's Act," a State law covering organized threats to persons and property and usually applied in strike situations, was cited by Mayor Chris H. Dailey of Martinsburg, this afternoon as due for rigorous enforcement here along with other statutes as a result of disturbances arising during current industrial labor difficulties.

Mayor Dailey said he would "cooperate with all law enforcement officers to the end that there shall be no threats of violence by organized groups respecting person or property."

Several cases of individual violence has been reported here during the past week, but only one officially called to police attention, it was said. In the latter a warrant charging gun carrying was issued for a clerk in the hosiery plant, who is said to have drawn it when a group of men accosted him as he went to his home and sought to persuade him not to report for further work. Reports also said there has been trouble in a section of the city last night that disturbed a prayer service, but police said they knew nothing of it. The cases were laid to the labor trouble.

French Cabinet Due for Upset In King's Death

Minister Resigns, Police Grill Two Held as Assassin's Aids.

Gardes Mobiles were closing in on still another suspect.

Arrest of this third man, identified as Sylvester Chalny by papers he dropped when police seized him once before, was expected before morning.

An official of the Surete Nationale tonight admitted that Kalemen's identity still was unknown.

His passport bearing that name has been proved definitely false, he said. A hotel keeper in Paris said he recognized the photograph published in newspapers as that of one Rudolph Suk, who filled out a hotel identification sheet as having been born at Trieste. This was no definite proof of his identity, police said, as that name, too, might be false.

The trail picked up at Annemasse was believed by Paris police to be the most promising.

Questioning of the two, the Surete Nationale said, brought indication that the assassination band was divided into two sections, one at Marseille, the other at Paris.

If the Marseille attempt had failed, the final act of the drama was to have been staged in Paris.

The man believed trapped in the Fontainebleau Forest was variously identified as Malny or Chalny or Nali through his hotel slips. He was sighted in that section of the forest known as Bois le Roi and police were rapidly closing in.

Three Held at Paris.

Meanwhile, Paris police continued rounding up suspected Yugoslavs, holding three for questioning. They were Paul Milavanovia, Petad Valentic and Djouro Yelovinna.

Rajtich revealed he and Novak were in Fontainebleau the day Alexander was assassinated, going from there to Versailles. They spent the night of October 9 in Fontainebleau and took train next morning for the frontier.

Hunger they experienced during the long train ride threw them into the arms of the detective who already was trailing them when they got off the train at Thomon.

After registering at a hotel there they went to a cafe, but since they could not give their order in French they turned to a neighbor and started a conversation in German.

The neighbor was Detective Meynet, who had been instructed to watch the strangers and who had trailed them from the station. They told him they were merchants who came to France for a vacation and planned to take a boat next day for Lusanne.

Virginia Childbirth Death on Increase

Richmond, Oct. 11 (AP).—Preliminary figures released by the bureau of vital statistics today indicate the mortality of Virginia women in childbirth is running higher this year than last.

For the six months ended June 30 the bureau reported 179 deaths, of which 102 were white women and 77 colored. If this rate continues to the end of the year, the total would be 356 deaths, as compared with 317 last year.

Scotland Yard's Men View Assassination

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—Scotland Yard officers visited a cinema in the West End today to see a film of assassination of King Alexander and French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou.

The detectives wanted to find whether they could recognize any international police characters among the crowd when the crime was committed.

U. S. Collects Dressler Tax.

Los Angeles, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Government collected $41,200 today from the estate of the late Marie Dressler, movie actress. The sum represented taxation on her income for the last months of her life and a compromise settlement on payments claimed as due in 1932 and 1933.

The actual assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Barthou of France. This picture, rushed by plane from Marseille to London and then radioed to New York, shows the assassin, Petrus Kalemen, backed against the running board of the King's automobile just after he had fired the fatal shots. He is holding his arms about his head to protect himself against the saber cut the mounted officer is about to deliver. Soldiers and detectives are rushing toward the killer.

Gold Critic

Prof. West Issues Blast Against Devaluation.

Academic criticism of President Roosevelt's gold purchase policy was reduced to the following epitome last night:

"If the Federal Government had gone into the market and paid 10 cents for every 5-cent hot dog on the roadside it would have had the same effect."

Reduction of gold content—"An even more radical and hysterical effort to raise prices."

The critic was Prof. W. Reed West, of George Washington University.

Boston Independent In Governorship Race

Boston, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—The gubernatorial contest in the Massachusetts State election next month will be a three-sided affair, as a result of today's announcement by Frank A. Goodwin, former chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, that he will run as an independent.

Goodwin, whose chief plank is a promise of lower automobile insurance rates, was defeated by Lieut. Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon for the Republican nomination. Former Mayor James M. Curley of Boston is the Democratic nominee.

First Lady Will Join President in Virginia

Peery honorary college degrees.

The President will come to Williamsburg on a special train from Roanoke, where he will dedicate a new veterans hospital on October 19, and Mrs. Roosevelt expects to motor from Washington on the morning of October 20.

25,000 Census Jobs to Hinge On Patronage

Democratic Selection of Workers Conceded by Bureau Head.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

New fuel was added to the political fire yesterday by a statement from the Department of Commerce frankly conceding that the 25,000 field supervisors and enumerators required for the 1935 census of agriculture will be selected "after consultation with Democratic Representatives in Congress."

Dropping the mask which hitherto has clouded the patronage involved in census taking, William L. Austin, director of the Census Bureau, announced that this course will be followed in conformity, he said, with the practice of former Adminstrations ever since the Civil War.

Thus were the fears of Republicans, who staved off an even larger census proposal at the last session, realized, since "consultation" was considered generally to be tantamount to dictation. The appointments will not be made, Austin added, however, until after November 15.

Democrats Claim Victory.

An influx of Democratic Senators, meantime, brought wholesale predictions of a sweeping victory for the Administration at the polls next month. Comment varied from the opinion of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo that "radical sentiment is actually ahead of the New Deal," to an admission by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, that "there are no parties any more."

Enlarging on this idea, Senator Lewis, visiting the White House, declared that Democrats are seeking to outdo one another in their protestations of loyalty to President Roosevelt—mostly in an effort, he conceded, to reap the benefits of New Deal funds.

"There's no use denying that," he said, with a shrug, adding that the Republican party is equally split—divided into two contending factions, composed, on the one hand, of old warriors standing by the old order, and, on the other, of youngsters, "dissatisfied" with their leaders.

Sees Sinclair Victory.

In his first press talk since his return from the West, Senator McAdoo, who was a White House caller Wednesday, declared that "in my opinion, the radical sentiment of this country has been greatly underestimated." Concerning Upton Sinclair, former Socialist-author whose campaign for Governor is agitating Eastern interests, he said:

"I think Sinclair has an excellent chance of being elected. I place no credence in reports that capital is taking fight out of California since the primaries. There is nothing in the situation to justify that."

Electric Power Firms Facing Rigid Control

Federal Grip on Holding Companies Expected to Be Tightened.

(Associated Press.)

An Administration recommendation for legislation in the next Congress that would throw a blanket of Federal control over electric power holding companies was forecast yesterday in an informed official quarter.

The same Administration official reported, however, that any attempt to supervise all investment trusts and holding companies seemed unlikely.

The question was brought to a head when the Senate Banking Committee proposed on Wednesday an extension of Federal regulation over the entire investment trust and holding company field. Almost immediately strong opposition feeling appeared in official circles against such a step at this time.

A Federal Power Commission official said yesterday, however, that he felt many in the electric power industry had come to the conclusion that Federal regulation of power holding companies and interstate transmission of electric current was not only inevitable but necessary.

The long study by the Federal Trade Commission, he said, had given data on power-holding companies that is lacking on other investment trusts and holding companies. Then, too, in his opinion, business generally would be upset in the face of proposed legislation directed toward Federal control of the ramified investment trust and holding company domain.

These views apparently coincide with those of Chairman Frank R. McNinch of the Power Commission. McNinch and other officials concerned with power policies and problems are working on a report to be made to the President in late December or early January.

From present indications, that study will urge regulation of power and perhaps gas holding companies, but will suggest that similar legislation affecting other industries be withheld until more data is gathered and the effect of the power statute is seen.

Officials emphasized, however, that the final decision would rest with President Roosevelt. He is expected to study the report carefully and may guide his course accordingly.

Police Seek to Build Up Clew Against Suspect.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—S. J. Mallan, overall factory official, tonight reconstructed for police his experience last night as a kidnap victim while the authorities attempted to build up the clew which brought at least one man under their suspicion.

Mallan said he was accosted by men who thrust in his face a sawed off shotgun, tied a handkerchief over his eyes, placed him in a car and drove him away. He said the muzzle of a gun was pressed against his neck. He was released near Alta Vista.

Fliers Familiar With Route Favored in 11,000-Mile Race

Kingsford-Smith Heads List of Famous Distance Pilots Who Will Compete in London-Melbourne Dash.

London (AP).—A small band of fliers in the 11,000-mile London-Melbourne air race will rely on experience gained in former travels over the route for that "extra something" to bring them victory.

The cream of the world's long-distance fliers have entered for the fly-away on October 20 for the cash stake totaling $75,000.

Richest of all in experience over the route will be Australia's "favorite son" and world-famed flier, Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith. "Smitty," who has entered a speedy American plane, has been over the route five times.

A Solo Record.

In 1929 in the Southern Cross, in which he had made his epic Pacific flight of 1928, he flew with three companions from Australia to England in 12 days, 21 hours, 18 minutes. In 1930 he set up a solo England-Australia record of 9 days, 21 hours, 40 minutes. In 1931 he retraced his path and a year later flew back as a mail carrier.

Last year he flew from England to Australia in 7 days, 4 hours, 47 minutes, which still stands as the solo record.

Smitty's companion in the October race will be P. G. Taylor, one of C. P. Ulm's crew in the Faith of Australia last October when the standing England-Australia record of 6 days, 17 hours, 56 minutes was established.

Great Britain's early favorite is tall, 31-year-old C. W. A. Scott. Scott, whose teammate will be another long-distance flier with experience in the East, T. Campbell Black, flew from England to Australia in 1931 in 9 days, 3 hours, 40 minutes. Then he said, "I would not make an attempt again for a million pounds." But he returned by air in the record time of just under 11 days and in 1932 flew to Australia in 8 days, 20 hours, 44 minutes.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Mollison, who will fly a duplicate of Scott's secretly groomed mount, share the experience of a round-trip England-Australia flight.

Mrs. Mollison as Miss Amy Johnson catapulted to fame in May, 1930, by accomplishing in 19½ days the first woman's solo flight from England to Australia. Mollison, whom she married in 1932, set up a record in 1931 by flying the reverse route in 8 days, 22 hours, 25 minutes.

Rubin Beat Mollison's Time.

A British entry who will fly a similar plane is Bernard Rubin, former motor racer. Early this year, in company with Ken Waller, he unofficially broke Mollison's Australia-England record by flying the distance in 8 days, 19 hours, 55 minutes.

Old Richmond Jail Visited by Jurors

Fitness to Be Decided in Mais-Legenza Break.

Richmond, Oct. 11 (AP).—Special grand jurors who are to fix the blame for the bloody jailbreak of gangsters, Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, today went to the old Richmond Jail to determine its fitness as a prison.

The grand jurors, hand-picked from among Richmond's business executives, went into the cell from which the doomed gansters shot their way to freedom, leaving one policeman mortally wounded and two others shot.

Judge Don P. Halsey, of Lynchburg, told the jurors if they didn't finish their investigation by tomorrow he probably would recess them until Monday.

Among the first witnesses on the list to appear before the jurors was Judge John L. Ingram, who sentenced Legenza to die October 22, and Mais to follow him to the electric chair November 1. Judge Ingram disqualified himself for service with the grand jury so he might testify.

2,000 Flock To Nice's Rally

G. O. P. Candidate, at St. Marys, Answers Ritchie Campaign Speech.

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.). A crowd of 2,000, one of the largest political gatherings ever assembled in St. Marys County, jammed the courthouse and surrounding grounds last night to hear Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for governor, answer Gov. Ritchie's opening campaign speech here Monday.

Nice vigorously flailed the Democratic assertion that that party had cut State expenses in the 1920 to 1934 period. Citing that assessments had been raised, he declared that in 1920 State expenses were approximately $11,000,000, and by 1934 had increased to $34,000,000. This, Nice blamed on the mismaagement and waste of funds by State officials.

Of the $8,000,000 collected yearly by the gas tax, Nice stated that $2,000,000 went for maintenance of the roads and $6,000,000 for the upkeep of Democrats. Nice declared that he would demand investigation upon his election.

Other Republican speakers, who supported Nice, were George Henderson, candidate for attorney general; Walter Quenstedt, candidate for the clerk of the Court of Appeals; William S. Atkins, candidate for State comptroller, and Joseph A. Wilmer, Congressional candidate from La Plata.

Ljubljana and Sarajevo See Anti-Italian Demonstrations.

Rome, Oct. 11 (AP).—Benito Mussolini watched developments in Yugoslavia growing out of King Alexander's assassination with increased vigilance tonight after Yugoslavs demonstrated against Italy today.

While riots at Ljubljana and Sarajevo directed against Italians caused no great alarm here, there were indications, nevertheless, that the government had its eyes turned toward Italy's eastern neighbor.

A close check was kept to see whether further displays of anti-Italianism followed.

There was no official confirmation here for reports of anti-Italian demonstrations at Belgrade and Zagreb, but reported unrest among the Yugoslavs themselves was watched carefully for fear the slaying of the dictator-King might lead to civil warfare.

The foreign office was inclined to give little importance to the Ljubljana incident, in which, it said, an Italian stenographer attached to the Italian consulate was shot at, but was protected by Yugoslav police and not injured.

Reports from Trieste that the consul himself was attacked were denied. The foreign office said the attack occurred on the street, some distance from the consulate, and police assistance was immediate.

Czech passports found on two men arrested in France today as suspected accomplices of King Alexander's assassin were forgeries, the Czechoslovakian Consul at Trieste said.

Authorities at Goritza, where one of the men claimed to have been born, said he was not known or registered there.

The Italian foreign office also called attention to the fact that the two men arrested in France were not born in Italy, even though the information on their passports were true. Gorizia and Zara, the cities their documents indicated as their birthplaces, were both on Austrian territory at the time they were born, it was pointed out.

Tobacco Growers Ask 5-Year Control

(Associated Press.)

A delegation representing North Carolina flue-cured tobacco growers petitioned the Farm Administration today to effect a five-year production control plan for that crop.

The delegation, calling upon J. B. Hutson, AAA tobacco chief, asked that a sign-up campaign be started as soon as possible.

Hutson intimated to newspapermen flue-cured growers would be asked to express themselves on some form of control to replace the temporary program now in effect.

In the event a long-time production program is adopted, another sign-up would be necessary.

Married Women Win Their Fight For Equality in Episcopal Church

Admitted to Deaconess Order After Bishops' Bitter Debate.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 11.—A victory for unhampered femininity was scored in the House of Bishops of the general convention of the Episcopal Church here today when the house declared itself in favor of married women being eligible to enter the order of deaconesses.

Vigorous discussion followed the reading of the majority report of the commission headed by the Right Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, warden of the College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral, which recommended that married women be excluded. Bishop Rhinelander, who signed the report, was not present, being kept from the sessions by illness. The majority report was defended, however, by the Right Rev. William T. Manning, Bishop of New York, with the Right Rev. Edward L. Parsons, Bishop of California, opposing it with the theory that married women should find marriage no bar if they wished to enter this order.

Debate Is Heated.

At times the debate was furious, but married women champions finally won the day. The issue will now come to the house of deputies for action. It is predicted that it will concur in the action of the house of bishops, thus settling this vexatious question, at least for this triennium.

Echoes of the depression were heard in the counting up of the united thank offering, and it was found that it was $200,000 short of the expected $1,000,000. The exact amount was $807,747.87.

Women of the Diocese of Washington contributed $15,000 to the offering.

Two hundred women, representing various branches of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Washington made a pilgrimage to participate in this greatest event of the auxiliary at the convention. Washington's gift was turned over by Miss Lucy Grant, custodian of the united thank offering for the diocese.

The Washington delegation was headed by Mrs. William Partridge, president of the diocesan branch, and she was escorted by the past president, Mrs. Spencer S. Wood.

Howden Assists Perry.

The Right Rev. Frederick Howden, missionary bishop of New Mexico, formerly rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown, assisted Bishop James De Wolf Perry, the presiding bishop, in celebrating the Holy Communion. A group of missionary bishops handed the sacred elements to nearly 5,000.

One hundred and fifty members of the Girls Friendly Society, clad in white dresses and wearing blue veils, collected the offering which then was placed in a historic golden alms basin given to the American church by Oxford University. These girls were under the direction of Mrs. Helen C. Brent.

Among the women attending the auxiliary sessions are: Diocese of Virginia, Mrs. Robert T. Barton, of Winchester; West Virginia, Mrs. Roger L. Kingsland, of Fairmont; diocese of southwestern Virginia, Mrs. Oscar De Wolf Randolph, of Lynchburg; diocese of southern Virginia, Mrs. Lewis Pilcher, of Petersburg; diocese of Maryland, Mrs. Samuel M. Shoemaker, of Eccleston.

Among the Washingtonians serving on important commissions and committees other than those held by Bishop Freeman are: Commission on Army and Navy chaplains, the Rev. Dr. Ze Barney and Maj. Gen. Charles P. Andrews; commission on the work of deaconesses, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair; National commission on Evangelism, Coleman Jennings; house of deputies standing committee on Evangelism, B. H. Howard; commission on the World Conference on Faith and Order, the Rev. Dr. Phillips and the Rev. Dr. G. Freeland Peter; commission on Christian healing, Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen; commission on King Theological Hall, Arthur S. Browne; joint commission on laymen, Eugene Thompson; standing liturgical commission, the Right Rev. Rhinelander and former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania; commission on church music, the Rev. Dr. Phillips; joint committee on status and work of presiding bishop, Hugh T. Nelson.

Exhibit Draws Attention.

The exhibit of Washington Cathedral which is under the direction of Edwin N. Lewis, executive secretary, is attracting much attention from the delegates.

In Bishop Freeman's annual report as chairman of the Army and Navy Commission he pointed out that appointment of Army and Navy chaplains was necessary to minister to the soldiers and sailors of the Nation. He explained there had been protests in regard to this from pacifist organizations.

Thank Offering Short of Goal; $807,747 Contributed.

Among the guests was William J. Carrington, president of Kiwanis International. E. I. Carruthers, of Charlottesville, Capital District governor, presided. The convention will get into full swing tomorrow with the principal speeches by International Trustee Edwin F. Hill and the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, both of Washington.

Johnson Slated For Blue Eagle PromotionRole

Friends Say He May Be the Adviser to Industries and Labor.

(Associated Press.)

Hugh S. Johnson was reported yesterday by friends to be considering setting up his own private Blue Eagle offices as an expert extraordinary on NRA codes.

As have some others who have stepped out of high New Deal posts, the former NRA chief also would serve as unofficial promoter of President Roosevelt's industrial peace plans.

A number of outstanding industrialists and labor leaders are known to have approached Johnson, seeking the dynamic general's services as a special adviser after he formally quits NRA next Monday.

They report the proposal is receiving Johnson's consideration. Some observers believe the project has even been the subject of White House discussion.

Johnson Noncommittal.

Johnson himself is keeping quiet and telling the press he will make no decisions on his next work for another month or two. But, contrary to reports of his expected return to New York, he arranged for private office space in Washington today.

This move is regarded by some as a definite indication Johnson will continue to devote himself to the code structure he built and in which he takes great pride.

Coincidently, it is reported that the White House is not overly pleased with the progress made so far toward the industrial truce suggested by Mr. Roosevelt, and believes there is a need for more spontaneous leadership toward this goal from non-Governmental sources.

Referee Post Is Seen.

Johnson's projected place, as described in some quarters here, would be that of a private negotiator retained by industry and labor to work out differences. The method that proved so successful in negotiating controversial NRA code—that of putting employers in one office and labor in another, with Johnson going back and forth between the two factions—probably would be brought into play.

These reports are not taken to mean Johnson would be under Presidential direction. Rather, the means by which he chose to earn his own living would help gain the industrial peace wanted by the White House.

Those discussing Johnson's plans say he would be retained on a fee basis by the industrial groups and labor organizations seeking his advice. It is expected he would work strictly within the code rules, the writing of which he directed.

While Johnson remained in Walter Reed Hospital yesterday for treatment of a sinus infection, his secretary, Miss Frances Robinson, announced that his personal story of NRA was near completion and already had been contracted for by publishers.

Danville Clash Leads to Court

Danville, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—A hearing will be given next week to participants in yesterday's battle in Hughes' warehouse between white and colored farmers. J. M. Wilson and W. H. Daniel, of Lawrenceville, are recovering from knife wounds and John Thomas Brown, Negro, of Caswell County, N. C., who lost an eye, also is recovering.

Police have been unable to determine the identity of all participants in the fight, occasioned when an automobile containing several Negroes, some of whom are said to have been intoxicated, ran over some tobacco which Daniel and Wilson were spreading on the warehouse floor.

Brown is charged with a felonious assault on Wilson and on Daniel and Wilson is charged with a felonious assault on Brown. The white men are said to have armed themselves with long steel hooks used to handle the tobacco baskets, one of these destroying Brown's eye.

Said Colonel Paul Jones: "Pedigree tells in whiskey just as it does in horses"

SIXTY-NINE years ago, Colonel Paul Jones started making the whiskey that has borne his name ever since.

From the very start, he used the slow hand-made methods inherited from the past. For he knew, as every whiskey man knows today, that these are the only methods that can produce great whiskey.

Today Paul Jones Whiskey is made in this self-same way. And it's made by the same company the Colonel founded—a company with four generations of whiskey-making knack, with four generations of jealous pride in its product.

An American Whiskey—not "American type"

Frankfort, the company that makes Paul Jones, is American-owned and American-managed. The water is the pure limestone water peculiar to Kentucky and Maryland—water that gives whiskey a richness you can get in no other way. And the whiskey is naturally aged in charred oak barrels under America's rigid regulations. No alcohol or spirits added!

Try Paul Jones—discover its ripe, full flavor. So different from imitation "American type" whiskies! Ask for Paul Jones in hotels and restaurants. And have no fear of it being bootleg. Paul Jones comes sealed in the patented bootleg-proof Frankfort Pack that must be destroyed before the bottle within it can be removed.

Synod Debates Speaker Curb

No Decision Made on Issue of Restricting Bible School Talkers.

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—The annual meeting of the Presbyterian Synod of Virginia was adjourned late today after a long debate on the question of restricting speakers at the Massanetta Springs Bible conference to those of evangelical beliefs.

The debate was precipitated in the morning by a resolution offered by the Rev. J. E. Courser, of Covington, protesting the appearance of Dr. Kirby Page, of Duke University, on the conference program last summer. The resolution would assure the future appearance of speakers in sympathy with the views of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Dr. P. W. Wilson, of Harrisonburg, president of the conference board, said the question narrowed down to one of whether an open forum was to be conducted or only those who uphold "your own beliefs should be heard."

Water Shortage Puzzles Heads Of Middletown

Reservoir Drop, in Spite of Rains, Makes Use of Pumps Necessary.

Middletown, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—Despite the fact that September was the wettest month for some years, more than 10 inches of rain falling in this section, Middletown residents are facing a water shortage, which may become acute unless relief is found before cold weather sets in. The burgess and commissioners are urging the citizens to use every precaution to avoid the unnecessary use or waste of water.

An inspection of the reservoir, about 1½ miles east of Middletown, revealed that the water had dropped to 16 inches below the overflow pipe, and it has been found necessary to start operating the pumping station nearby, in an effort to replenish the supply. Water is being pumped daily from the extra receiver into the reservoir.

The cause of the shortage seems to be a mystery, for it is known that the heavy rains of the past few months soaked the ground to a depth of 6 or 7 feet. In fact, officials state that there has been enough rainfall to cause the reservoir to overflow.

Edgar H. Coogle, chairman of the town water committee, and other officials visited the 14 springs in Catoctin Mountain from which the water supply is secured, and found that the flow from the springs is far below normal. This, they say, indicates that a portion of the water flowing into the springs has either changed its course and found some other outlet or the rains have not yet soaked through the ground to the level of the stream bed.

Work is progressing on the new 1,500,000-gallon reservoir, which is being constructed on a site adjoining the present reservoir, as a Federal Emergency Relief project, under the supervision of Mr. Koogle. About 30 persons were employed three days each week, and the reservoir is now more than half completed.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.). Approximately $4,100 of FERA money will be disbursed to 273 University of Virginia students for the past month's work on school and community projects, it was announced today by Charles H. Kauffman, director of the Federal student relief program here, who is preparing the first of nine pay rolls for the school year.

Hill Man Held In Wife Attack

West Virginian Accused of Beating, Trying to Drown Mate.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—Adam Williamson, mountain resident, was in custody here today, charged with attempted murder of his wife, officers said they learned, he tried three times to submerge her in Back Creek after first beating her with his hands.

A neighbor, Chet Minghini, was attracted by the woman's cries and tore her from her husband's grasp, the officers were told.

Officers found difficulty in arresting Williams at his home and said he admitted beating the woman, but denied trying to drown her. He comes from Rockingham, Va.

Publicity And Crime.

In our letter column today Mr. Hyacinthe Ringrose criticises the "stupendous folly" involved in revealing the outline of important criminal cases before trial. This practice, he says, tends to give the accused an unjust advantage, allowing him to build up an alibi counter to the evidence which the State expects to present.

Inferentially Mr. Ringrose condemns the newspapers for printing this advance information. There is much to be said in behalf of his argument against giving away valuable evidence. There are cases where witnesses have been murdered because the State allowed their names to become public. The district attorney, generally an elected officer, too often reveals more than he should in his desire for helpful publicity. Theodore Dreiser, in "An American Tragedy," ably and at length described the "typical" district attorney of this kind, the obvious result of depending upon the electorate to pick its representative in the courts.

The newspapers, on the other hand, are neither agents of the prosecution nor of the defense. Their duty is to keep the public informed of what is happening. In the Lindbergh case they nobly departed from this tradition at the request of officials, and public opinion, and withheld much news at the start in an effort to aid the search for the criminals.

There is another, and perhaps equally grave, objection to the issuance of information in cases like that against Bruno Hauptmann. By presenting its case to the newspapers in detail, something which, as Mr. Ringrose points out, the defense can not afford to do, the prosecutor brings about that American evil which we call "trial by newspaper."

This method detracts from the chances of the accused when he appears before a jury of his peers. Already the public has made up its mind. Sometimes, we suspect, the district attorneys are not unwilling to hold their trial first in the newspapers. It is to their advantage when they bring the prisoner before the bar. For it is much easier to convict a man whom all the world assumes is guilty than one with whom there rests a "reasonable doubt."

In Defense Of Husbands.

It is not often that women are put in the position, or at least feel called upon, to defend their husbands to the world. It is even less frequently that wives feel they have enough to say on the subject to fill a book.

The widow of D. H. Lawrence comes forward with her memoirs as the wife of a slandered man. Be it said to her credit that she performs her rather delicate task with quiet dignity and with only a minimum of vitriolic denials. She does not make the mistake, either, of taking the defensive. She states her side simply and clearly and lets the case rest. "His fate is in your hands," she seems to say.

Mrs. Frieda Lawrence was a German woman with all the infinite patience of that much-tried race. It could not have been an easy life which she led with the surly, tempestuous, burning Lawrence. When some one remarked that she did not appear to be the right woman for such a man, Frieda Lawrence replied, "Try it then yourself, living with a genius, see what it is like and how easy it is. Take him if you can."

Brave words, from a brave woman. Strange words, from a strange wife. Defiant words from the mate of a genius.

The majority of husbands will do well to ponder the nature of a post-mortem judgment in the form of wifely memoirs. It might result in less attention to the morning mail, and in an increase of business for flower shops.

Montgomery County Relief.

Intimations that relief distribution in Montgomery County is subordinated to politics are not going unanswered. One effective reply is found in the announcement that as a result of a survey of the county relief organization by independent experts it has been selected as a State training center for social work executives and aids in Maryland.

The administrative board in charge of relief policies is composed of an exceptionally qualified group, including two physicians of the highest standing in the county, a business man, two professionally-trained social workers and a widely-recognized authority on county government, Miss Lavina Engle. The executive staff is composed of trained workers selected by competitive examination.

Relief distribution has been a sorry political mess in so many communities that Montgomery County can well take pride in the high standards which it has established. Doubtless there are shortcomings open to improvement. But residents of the county are for the most part too well informed on the facts to be disturbed by the innuendo of a heated political campaign.

What Next For Agriculture?

Although President Roosevelt adheres to his belief that a further rise in prices is essential, he has made it clear that the Administration is not committed to a return to 1926 prices. The emphasis which he now places upon a restoration of farm prices to their pre-war parity is extremely significant. Apparently it means that the Administration is more concerned to obtain a better-balanced price structure than to raise the general price level by monetary manipulation or inflationary expedients of other sorts.

If pre-war parity for agricultural prices is the goal of present endeavors, considerable progress has already been made toward its attainment. On September 15, for example, the index number of prices received by farmers for their products was 2 per cent above the level of the pre-war base period, 1909-1914, whereas a year ago the index was 20 per cent below the pre-war level. Meantime the index of prices paid by farmers for commodities bought has advanced much more slowly, standing 26 per cent above the pre-war average in mid-September compared with the 16 per cent increase recorded a year ago. The net result is that farm prices have advanced to 81 per cent of their pre-war parity as contrasted with only 69 per cent in September, 1933.

However, to give to agricultural commodities their pre-war purchasing power with respect to articles that farmers buy, further substantial increases in the average level of farm prices would be required. Specifically, the parity price for wheat now selling on the farm at an average price of about 92 cents per bushel is $1.11 per bushel, and the parity price for cotton, selling for approximately 13 cents per pound, is 15.6 cents. In a few cases, such as oats, barley and flue-cured tobacco, pre-war parity had actually been reached or passed by the middle of this September.

Supplementing such evidences of the progress made toward elimination of the spread between the prices of commodities bought and sold by the farmer, comes analysis of the recent decided expansion of farmers' incomes. Despite drought losses, it is estimated that there has been a gain in farmers' buying power of 44 per cent as compared with March, 1933. August farm income, including benefit payments, was on the average about 80 per cent above that for the first quarter of 1933.

In the face of this marked improvement in their status, farmers will receive $300,000,000 in benefit checks during the remainder of this year, in addition to about $100,000,000 due for Government cattle and sheep purchases. On top of this, Administrator Hopkins has just announced that the FERA is using $25,000,000 of PWA funds to buy submarginal lands from their owners. This will mean a non-repetitive addition to the incomes of a small and particularly needy section of the farm population.

With the long-desired adjustment between farm and other prices well advanced, the future of the AAA's program of planned production becomes a subject for critical consideration. Will it be necessary, for example, to continue paying benefits to reduce crop output, in face of price increases that have so greatly reduced the farmers' earlier disadvantage? Is it feasible to scrap the control mechanism on the supposition that the gains to farmers will be permanent? Is it possible to proceed intelligently with a plan for withdrawing submarginal lands from cultivation while agricultural prices are rising so that what is submarginal today may not be so next year?

There is no way of determining the relative weight of the various factors contributing to the rise in prices of farm products. The AAA restriction programs and the drought have been largely responsible, but it would be useless to try to gauge their importance in monetary terms, or that of the other causes of increased prices. In the absence of definite knowledge of this sort, the probabilities of a price reaction are very difficult to appraise. Consequently, the extent of future restriction programs becomes a matter of guesswork.

In view of these uncertainties, the time is at hand for considering the agricultural adjustment problems of the future in the light of the partly planned, but largely fortuitous, gains already achieved. A permanent improvement in the economic position of the farmer undoubtedly calls for some kind of systematic planning. But it must be comprehensive planning to extend markets for farm products and to diversify farm output, not a mere continuation of the system of paying farmers to cut output and thus curtail National wealth.

Equity, Not Liberality.

Commissioner Hazen's assurance that local authorities will seek a larger Federal contribution to the District budget would have been more impressive if supported by an impartial study of the fiscal relationship between the two governments. Mere requests for expansion of the so-called lump sum have little influence in Congress. They should have little influence, until the Commissioners make an explicit case.

An appeal to Congressional reason and sense of fair play seems to be the only possible method through which an equitable division of the expense of maintaining the National Capital can be hoped for. Commissioner Hazen's remarks to the American University Park Citizens Association were not conducive to that end. In fact, unsupported pleas for more Federal money with no increase in District taxes may readily tend to antagonize Congress.

Citizens' associations and other representative groups have pledged themselves not to oppose higher taxes for necessary municipal improvements, providing Congress will do its share. Their attitude is realistic as well as fair. Certainly no progress toward equitable adjustments can be expected to result from demands for "liberal" contributions or reversion to the obsolete 50-50 basis of dividing expenses. Taxpayers of the District would be well pleased by an equitable division of costs under which the Federal Government would pay only for service rendered by local agencies and for special embellishment of the city undertaken because it is the Nation's Capital.

When Congress abolished the Bureau of Efficiency it was conducting a detailed study of the fiscal relations between the Federal Government and the District. Apparently that work was never completed. Congressional committees have undertaken similar inquiries with disappointing results. A new investigation of the District government and its problems is now under way, with several competent officials furnishing information to a select Congressional committee.

Obviously the Commissioners' recommendations for an increase in the Federal contribution would be stronger if based upon these extensive data. The Commissioners will have an excellent opportunity to bring this material to the attention of Congress and the public at the hearings scheduled for this fall. If they are interested in making a determined fight for an equitable adjustment of fiscal responsibility in Washington, no better opportunity is likely to open to them.

Dislocation In France.

The tremendous dramatic qualities inherent in the assassination of King Alexander have tended to obscure the difficult problems which confront France as a result of the simultaneous murder of her brilliant foreign minister, Louis Barthou. This problem is intensified by the manner of the resignation of the minister of the interior, Albert Sarraut. As the official responsible for police arrangements and domestic order it was inevitable that the Marseille outrage would force Sarraut from the cabinet.

With a government already weakened by the Stavisky scandal, Premier Doumergue thus suddenly finds himself confronted with the necessity of filling at least two important cabinet posts. Such choices are bound to affect the delicate political balance which holds him in power. French domestic policy is not unlikely to follow unexpected shifts as a result.

In the field of foreign policy, even assuming that no new international complications arise from the assassinations, the dislocation for France is still more pronounced. As foreign minister, Barthou was pursuing a most carefully planned, energetic and far-reaching campaign. It is ironic that the fatal visit of Alexander to France was a part of his long-range strategy, which in essence aimed at consolidating the peace of Europe on a firm and lasting basis.

Certain results of this policy were already apparent. Virtually single-handed, the old veteran had brought Russia into the League of Nations. Again virtually single-handed he had worked out the scheme of regional security agreements which are confronting Germany with the alternative of rejoining the League, or of sinking into an isolation without parallel in European history. Another high point was the development of Franco-Italian conciliation, which was proceeding in spite of Mussolini's caustic comments for domestic consumption.

The Barthou policy, in short, was one of the distinctly hopeful signs in Europe. Although designed primarily for French security, it was none the less proceeding on the assumption that European stability is a prerequisite of such security. And, like Briand before him, Barthou was working openly, and in full accord with the principles of the League of Nations Covenant, to secure his ends.

The death of Barthou, at this particular moment, is, therefore, to be regarded as a world tragedy. His policy, while well-advanced, had not reached the stage where its success was assured. And whether his unnamed successor will be able to consolidate it, or will have the influence abroad to carry out the dead leader's ideas according to plan, is by no means certain.

As time permits reflection on the many new angles created by the tragedy of Marseille, its tremendous significance becomes greater rather than less. The chief cause for optimism as to the consequences lies in the fact that the very seriousness of the situation will tend to encourage a conciliatory and cooperative attitude where heretofore disagreement and discord have been the rule.

Cutting The Liabilities.

In the opinion of the President, the Administration was confronted by three alternatives when it set out to reduce the burden of indebtedness, under which the people of the United States were laboring when he came into office.

One method of procedure would have been to decree an arbitrary scaling of all debts. Another choice lay in efforts to raise price levels and thus alleviate the burden of existing debts. A third involved indirect cuts in debts, such as those effected through refinancing of farm and home mortgages, and liberalization of bankruptcy procedure. The first choice, according to the President, was ruled out because of constitutional obstacles. So reliance was placed upon a combination of price-raising policies and indirect scaling of debts.

It is not inappropriate to remember that when it was decided to suspend gold payments and devalue the dollar, the Government interfered in a most arbitrary and wholesale fashion with existing debt contracts. The presumable constitutionality of the procedure provides no defense against the criticism that it was arbitrary, undiscriminating and not adapted to attainment of the end sought.

The Government says there are four days in a week in which we can't kill wild ducks. The Government doesn't know us. There are seven days in a week in which we can't kill wild ducks.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Publicity and Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a member of Middle Temple, formerly practicing the law in London and Paris, I am amazed at the stupendous folly of the American police and prosecuting authorities in giving criminals, their accomplices and counsel, advance information as to character and degree of proof upon which they rely to secure convictions. Take the case of Hauptmann, for example. Your editorial of October 8, headed "Positive Identication," shows The Post is deeply concerned in the proper administration of justice; but you say nothing as to the prosecution continually giving away its case to the defense.

Is it not a fact that outlaws like John Dillinger have only to read the newspapers to find out where the police are looking for them, and then go the other way? Has it ever occurred to you that the daily newspaper by telling the fugitive where the police are looking for him, and what evidence the district attorney expects to offer at the trial, is really offering first aid to the criminal?

May I ask what would happen to a newly fledged attorney if he betrayed his client's case, as thoroughly as the average American prosecutor betrays that of his client, the sovereign State? Would it not be more ethical for the prosecutor to restrain his flair for publicity until he has convicted the criminal?

It is about time for politically selected district attorneys to realize that by reason of the archaic technicalities still obtaining in this country, the State is sufficiently handicapped without the attorney for the State destroying his case by "spilling the beans" to the criminal and his assistants. After carefully informing Hauptmann of the name and address of every prospective witness against him, together with a summary of the proposed testimony, it should not be very difficult for the defendant to build an alibi or some other spurious defense upon which to hang a "reasonable doubt."

In making the foregoing criticism, which I submit is amply justified even though I am an Englishman domiciled in the United States, I wish to make it plain that in so doing I am not comparing American judicial procedure with that of England. I go much further than any such comparison. I say that nowhere else on earth, outside of the United States, do detectives, policemen and prosecuting attorneys commit the unprofessional and unpardonable offense of exposing the prosecution's case to criminals and their accomplices.

Favors For Favorables?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I chant the bereaved knell of one who has applied for work in all fields of endeavor for which he is qualified, only to find, in the long run, that it is not knowledge which pays; it is not honesty; it is not perseverance; it is not conscious right living? No! It is democracy that pays. Good and faithful (?) Democrats are the recipients.

It is a matter for real concern that only those who are in accord with the policies of the Administration are made the craftsmen of its structure. But can a ballot on which is marked a sign of political affiliation signify the spirit in which the voter accepts the expanded measures of the Government, his temperament toward changing conditions of time, his ability to persevere in moments when all forces need work for the common good of a struggling Nation of 120,000,000 people, his qualifications for positions of merit?

The Administration has shown unusual willingness and humanitarian the homeless, provide work for the efforts to feed the hungry, shelter jobless and put individual enterprise in a position where profits will merit increased pay rolls. One's pride prevents him many times from asking food, from seeking shelter and becoming a charity case. His status in society was never that of the oppressed. It shall never be his design to accept succor from man, money or movements. He feels only the urge to achieve in his own right and by his own might.

Socialist Answer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Observer," of Takoma Park, D. C., recently stated in your columns that more and more confusion and uncertainty has been the only result of proposed remedies for human ills in the social, economic and political fields. Then he points out that a vast majority seems headed for Socialism. But he does not seem to know just what Socialism may be.

"Observer" needs to read up a bit on Socialist economics. Capitalist economics do not work out any more, as they are obsolete and were based largely on theory, rather than demonstrable fact. Socialist economics are more scientific. Socialists know that the consumers make prosperity. If the consumer is a low-paid farmer, or worker of hand or brain, or both, he can not buy much in the way of consumption goods. These goods really are responsible for what little prosperity we get under capitalism.

The idea of "Observer" that the Government is now in the condition of an individual who takes no nourishment and tries to live from his tissues is ridiculous. What becomes of all this money which the Government is spending? Why, it goes right back into the profiteering industries again, and they reap more profits each time the money is circulated from hand to hand.

Socialism offers the only solution.

Gen. Gates' Home.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reference is made to the article in The Post of October 9 describing the discovery in a pile of old papers of a letter written by Gen. Horatio Gates to Gen. von Steuben, dated from Traveller's Rest, which is assumed to be some long-forgotten inn. The finder may be interested to know that the name of Gen. Gates' home and estate—on which he lived after the Revolutionary War—was Traveller's Rest. The letter was probably written from his own home.

The place is located in Jefferson County, of what is now West Virginia. The house, which is of stone, is in good condition and is still occupied. Three other Revolutionary generals lived within a radius of a few miles; Daniel Morgan at Saratoga; Charles Lee at Leetown, and Gen. Darke at Duffields.

H. W. KEARNEY.
Washington, Oct. 9.

"For a Chance."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just learned that the system of automobile license numbers in the District is to be changed this coming year. We now have the best system of license numbering in the country—easy to read and easy to remember. By abandoning the lettered series and using numbers only, running to five and six figures, a definite step backward is being taken.

I learn also that the color combination is to be changed next year to green and white. The Bureau of Standards, by careful tests, has determined that the combination of yellow and black affords the highest visibility of any combination of colors, and this has been confirmed by the Air Corps. The District was the first to adopt this combination and has been followed by most of the States in the Union.

On inquiring why these changes were being made I was told that the Commissioners were "tired" of the old system and wanted something new. This is characteristic of every action of the "New Deal"—the scrapping of every existing system merely for the sake of change. While I am entirely conscious of the complete futility of so doing, I can not refrain from voicing my protest against so unnecessary and so retrograde a proceeding as the alteration of our present system of automobile license numbers.

As Others See It

Unrest in Cuba

A few years ago, political instability plagued many Latin-American countries, retarded their development and impoverished their people, but all except Cuba have been able to suppress the internal strife which sapped their lifeblood.

The appalling disorder which still exists in Cuba, that island which should be an earthly paradise, rather than a seething cauldron of dissension, unrest and starvation, is illustrated by the flight from the country this week of Ramon Grau San Martin, who was president for six months following the fall of the Machado regime.

Arriving in Miami by airplane, Dr. Grau San Martin said he came to the United States for "his health." The sudden change of residence, however, was not dictated by a physician. He left Cuba because the unsettled political situation made it unhealthy for him to remain. The former president revealed that he expects to live in the United States until he is advised that his life will be safe if he returns.

Little more than a year ago the Machado dictatorship was overthrown in a bloody revolt. Since that time, five provisional presidents have held the reins of government, with wildest disorder and confusion accompanying each change.

At present, precarious peace is maintained because the island has been converted into an armed camp, with soldiers holding the government together with bayonets.

Victims of the financial and political intrigues which have led to revolutions and counter-revolutions, bombings, bitter conflict and bloody rioting, are the nearly 4,000,000 people who live on the island.

Unstable government is the most expensive in the world. The country is drained dry by taxation. Outside Havana, the most abject poverty is the rule. During the past few years, with sugar markets unfavorable, suffering among the masses has been intense.

It has been charged frequently that American interests with heavy investments in Cuba have had a part in the frequent changes in government, the theory being advanced among Cuban political parties that uprisings were financed by American interests, in the hope of maintaining a favorable government. Bitterness against Americans for financial intervention, which the Cubans consider equivalent to actual military intervention, is widespread.

So far the American government has ignored these charges which have been voiced at home as well as in Cuba, but in view of the continuing unrest on the island, the growing misery of the people and the chaotic political situation which still prevails, it appears they should be ignored no longer.

An official investigation either would prove very serious charges baseless or reveal the interests which have been shaping political events in Cuba to suit their own purposes.

The Hole In The Doughnut.

Postoffice, Friday.

WHICH do you eat—doughnuts or crullers?
Or do you eat both?
And if you do eat both, what is the difference between them?

* * *

Yes, the hardy old struggle is on again. After resting through a torrid summer, the eternal Doughnut-Cruller War has entered upon its 1934 autumnal campaign.

* * *

Under which flag are Washingtonians in arms?
Or are they disastrously divided?

* * *

Of course, the first shot had to be fired by the New York Sun. That was traditional. Of old, the Sun used to wait until the frost was on the Brooklyn pumpkin. This year it returns mid-October thanks to the National Doughnut Committee for a gift of doughnuts—and then shoots.

It says: "Acceptance of such favors, however, does not imply meek submission to the dictates of the Doughnut Trust. A close inspection of the gift doughnuts reveals that they are mostly doughnut and very little hole. This may be the result of the machine-age production of an old-fashioned comestible. It may be the desire to give the consumer more for his money. Whatever its motives, the bare result is bad: the hole is essential to the doughnut, and it should not be abolished."

* * *

Immediately New England rallies round New York. A feminine correspondent from the Newtons—the Bostonian imitation of Chevy Chase—writes to the Boston Herald that, this time, this fight must be fought to a finish, if it takes all winter. Says she, in effect:

It is a grave error that, in some barbarous—and therefore not New English—hinterlands, a "layer-cake" should be called a pie: "Washington Pie." It is a symptom of ominous tendencies that, in similar quarters, the term "dropped eggs" should be applied to "poached eggs." But it is a crying outrage—an outrage crying for drastic and final remedy—that savages should go around confusing crullers with doughnuts.

A doughnut, avers this Newtonian, must have a hole in it, whereas a cruller mustn't.

* * *

The Philadelphia Inquirer admits that "in New England generally the doughnut has a hole in the center, while the cruller does not." But, says the Inquirer, "Philadelphians know better. . . . It is the cruller that has the hole."

* * *

Thus is the regrettable war raging. And, so far, we have caught only one whisper of a willingness to submit the issue to arbitration. The extreme Northerners and their Manhattan allies pour forth a continuous cannonade. But those Quaker City batteries do murmur between their own bitter barrages:

"There is imminent need that some deep thinker should investigate the subject and set forth his conclusions in an authoritative work."

* * *

Of course, a great deal of deep thought has already been devoted to the question. There's Dr. Noah Webster, for instance:

"CRULLER: (Cf. D. krullen, to curl). A small sweet cake made of a rich egg batter, cut into rings, strips or twists and fried brown in deep fat. . . .

"DOUGHNUT: A small cake, usually sweetened, often made with yeast, and fried brown in deep fat."

It does not avail to point out that Webster was born in West Ha'tfo'd, Conn., and got his degree at Yale. The New England School of Doughnut Art simply replies that he was an apostate and that, in the new editions of his dictionary—even if they are published at Springfield, Mass.—the original text has probably been corrupted, anyhow.

* * *

No, no! The needed deep thinker must hail from a neutral district, where there is nobody to condemn him as a traitor or reward him as a patriot.

Moreover, he can't legitimately hope to compromise by appeal to that fanatic sect inhabiting remote portions of southeastern Ohio which considers a doughnut "anything made of dough." Nor can he get away with the argument that the distinction between crullers and doughnuts depends upon the quantity of shortening employed.

He must square the circle.

* * *

Meanwhile, we continue to wonder about Washington—and to wonder uneasily. Our city's population is largely of such mixed geographic origins that any intensification of the dispute might end upon barricades across Pennsylvania avenue.

It even seems that here, and in Maryland, and especially in the Keystone State—not a hundred miles from the Philadelphia stronghold o crullerdom—a third faction rises to confound confusion. Working in Washington is a Marylander whose parents were Pennsylvania Dutch. Of him we optimistically inquired:

"What's a doughnut—or a cruller?"

And it was with rising warmth that he answered:

"We have 'em on the evening before Lent begins. They're made with batter or yeast and fried in fat, and they're any shape you please. But the right name for 'em is FASTNACHTS!"

A Man's Past.

THERE can be no better illustration of the adage that a man can't shake off his past than the experience Mr. Roosevelt had yesterday.

BARGERON

It was a tough break, one that would undoubtedly discourage a man less hardy than the President.

To appreciate just what happened we must understand, that, according to the interpreters of National events, a great change has come over Mr. Roosevelt recently. All of a sudden he decided to swing to the right, to do everything within his power to encourage business, which, in turn, would increase employment.

As I understand it, from reading the interpreters, this had not been his attitude before. He had been against business and in favor of reform. But he has finally come to see the error of his ways and from now on business can count him as a friend.

* * * * *

It seems that business had just been coming along without considering whether he was a friend or not until he made his now famous Green Bay speech. Then business simply up and stopped and decided it would go no further without Mr. Roosevelt's friendship.

Both sides squared off for awhile. Business submitted certain questions to which it demanded answers before it would go one step further toward recovery. After some reluctance on Mr. Roosevelt's part a compromise was reached and he answered some of the questions whereby business agreed that was victory enough for the time being and decided to go ahead.

The interpreters have been busy for a week or more emphasizing Mr. Roosevelt's reform, not only the interpreters, but Mr. Richberg.

* * * * *

Well, right in the midst of this situation who should bob up at the White House yesterday but old Prof. Warren, the baloney dollar man, the professor himself, back from Europe where he has been delving into currencies. Yes, sir, he's the man who invented an egg-laying machine that would make hens lay at night, and from this accomplishment developed under Mr. Roosevelt's sponsorship to be a monetary expert.

It just seems like a man can't reform when he wants to. Here is an associate out of the past, a past when, as business looks upon it, Mr. Roosevelt was in very bad company, indeed. Scarcely any sooner than he had promised, according to the interpreters, that he would keep better company in the future, here comes the professor.

* * * * *

It is as if the old evil associates were off somewhere smirking at the reports they read of Mr. Roosevelt's reform, that they said to each other: "Ah, so he has reformed, has he? He wants to get away from us of the evil days; he would shun us now. Well, we'll just go down to Washington and see. If he tries to snub us we can stand off and shout we knew you when——"

Mr. Roosevelt didn't snub the professor, though. I don't know what his emotions were when he heard that, of all people, the professor was outside. But what he did, believe it or not, was to invite the professor right in to luncheon.

It puts a pretty job up to the interpreters. How can they explain this, the welcoming with open arms, apparently, of an associate out of the dark past. Does it mean that after trying it for a few days Mr. Roosevelt didn't like the reform; that it just goes against his grain? Does the professor's visit mean a slipback, a reversion, should we say, to type?

Or does it mean that the President simply couldn't resist a momentary reversion; that he wants to break with the past easily? After all, it is difficult to shake off old habits. Business should try to bear with him before it gets mad again. If he is really trying to reform, that is all that can be asked.

Tobacco Growers Get $800,000 Cash

U. S. Agents Closely Watch Warehouse Checks.

Danville, Va., Oct. 11.—Department of Agriculture agents are engaged here in seeing that tobacco growers get no more money than that to which they are entitled. They are assigned to each of the nine tobacco warehouses and make 25 per cent deductions from the checks payable to all farmers who did not come in under the AAA regulations providing for crop reduction.

Those growers who did not agree to cut their crops claim they will make more money in the long run than the farmer who agreed to the 30 per cent curtailment, in spite of the Government taking away 25 per cent of the proceeds.

The high returns are evidenced in many ways. Merchants report a volume of business approaching that a week before Christmas. Mortgages are being retired and the farmers who have in two days received nearly $800,000 cash are in a happier frame of mind than at any time in recent years.

Hagerstown Councilman Placed on Code Board

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—W. Lee Elgin, a member of the Hagerstown City Council, has been appointed a member of the Plumbing Contracting Code Authority and will represent Washington County on aboard of two other members, A. E. Fisher, of Frederick, and Councilman Shaffer, of Westminster.

Aviation Pipe Dreams Attacked by Harbord

Wars Will Continue to Be Won in the Dirt, Says Former Army Chief of Staff.

ABOARD S. S. Queen of Bermuda, en route to Bermuda, Oct. 11 (AP).—Maj. Gen. James G. Harboard, former Army chief of staff, urged tonight against developing aircraft on a "pipe dream" program and declared "all wars have been won and all wars will continue to be won in the dirt."

"Decisive warfare is fundamentally the same today," he said, "as it was before the spectacular development of weapons such as the catapult, firearms, the submarine, the tank and aircraft.

"That fundamental should be the solid basis for every consideration of military problems. It is that every war must be won—finally—by sending men into enemy territory—and holding it.

"No great Nation will ever be subdued so long as it has fighting men on their feet on solid earth ready and able to repulse an invading force. * * * No air armada has yet flown whose personnel could not be run in by the municipal police if it landed in hostile territory."

* * * * *

THE former chief of staff, now chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, addressed the joint convention of the International Association of Casualty and Surety Underwriters and the National Association of Casualty and Surety Agents.

Gen. Harbord asserted he favored the program for doubling the Army's fighting aircraft and added there seemed little doubt that Congress would pass it.

"Our country needs an Air Corps of the first rank," he continued. "It has been hampered in the development of one by the irresponsible claims of over-zealous military aviation enthusiasts as much as by the crashing rejoinders of antiaviation factions. * * *

"It will be useful to try to separate fact from fancy in this field that always has had such a strong hold on popular imagination. * * * * * *

"THE favorite vision of the most exuberant air-war prophets might well cause an epidemic of nightmares among our more timid citizens. It pictures great armadas from hostile powers swooping down from the sky upon our helpless citizens.

"In a few hours bombs will topple our great skyscrapers like dominoes. Poison gas will clutch at the lungs of the citizens fleeing in terror, and the rising sun of the next day will find only death and destruction where a few hours earlier a proud metropolis teemed with life. * * *

"One basic thing is wrong with the calamitous picture. That is that such a devastating air raid into our land is impossible with the aviation of today or with any we can now foresee. * * *

"The necessity of a base on land or sea for any effective and continuous military airplane operations is completely ignored by most spinners of air-war horror dreams. * * * To maintain floating bases off our shores, an invader would have to subdue our Navy.

"As to the possibility of a land base near our borders, it is hardly to be expected that our air force and our battleships would stand idly by while an enemy was fitting up such a hornet's nest and bringing supplies and ammunition to it."

H. I. Phillips' Once Over

The world series is over and America can now get back to worrying about minor matters such as food, housing and clothing.

* * * * *

For a full week the country forgot the depression, unemployment and even NRA.

* * * * *

The question whether President Roosevelt would turn to the right was overshadowed by the question of how many times Dizzy Dean would have to be hit in the head with a baseball before feeling it.

* * * * *

The Nation stopped asking, "Do you think things are picking up?" and for six days its chief queries were, "Has the Schoolboy lost his fast one?" "Who's leading now?" and "Is Daffy as good as his brother?"

* * * * *

President Roosevelt was put into a total eclipse by Dizzy Dean, and boys like Donald Richberg, Guy Tugwell and Doc Moley could have made the headlines only by getting into baseball suits and spiking Secretary Perkins.

* * * * *

Even the Vanderbilt hearing stopped playing for public attention and was put on privately, while the issue whether little Gloria was ever taught to shake cocktails by her mother gave way to the more important question whether Daffy Dean had ever been taught to read and write by his old man.

* * * * *

Spain tried to start a revolution when it looked as if the series would be a short one, but had to call it off when Detroit kept tying it up.

* * * * *

The Insull trial began in Chicago, but it never had a chance of making anything but the inside pages. Any mention of Insull brought a baffled look and the query, "Which team is he on?"

* * * * *

Even the latest European war crisis waited until the war between Ducky Wucky Medwick and Detroit was over.

* * * * *

These world series battles are great things for the country. They make us forget budgets, inflation worries and the fact that we're having warmed-over hash for the fifth successive night.

* * * * *

In fact, the news that $1,000,000 was taken in at the gates again for the first time in years does more to convince us that the worst is over than the President's fireside radio chats, the bulletins from Miss Perkins, and the speeches of Postmaster General Farley.

* * * * *

After all, what America may need more than anything else is more world series. Look what they mean to the pop-bottle industry alone!

Series End.

The tumult and the shouting dies—
The Ducky-Wuckies all depart,
The Goose picks up and Southward flies,
The Lippy Leos homeward start.

The Wild Bills and the Chicks fade out—
The Mickies and the Hanks are still,
No bottles crash, no Landis shouts,
There are no sounds like Bunker Hill.

Far-called, the Peppers melt away—
On dune and headland sinks the roar,
The Dizz and Daff have naught to say—
I guess the series must be o'er.

Well, the Dean brothers must be all that the Dean brothers said they were.

Portrait of a Series Wonder.

In fortune's arms
The kid was locked—
He wasn't spiked
Or mobbed or socked!

The rumor that Detroit will protest the Cardinal victory, claiming that the club wasn't built according to the specifications and that the two clubs don't speak the same language, could not be confirmed today.

Among the most nervous men in the world today is the fellow who has always insisted there was no possibility of another war in Europe for years to come.

Vote Is Sought In Hagerstown

Move on for Referendum to Settle Request for Charter Change.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—Hagerstown may vote for the second time in 10 years on the question of amending its charter to change the form of government.

A movement already has been launched here to have the General Assembly, which will convene in January, to provide for a referendum on the question of eliminating ward lines and to elect a full-time mayor and three councilmen at large, instead of councilmen from each of the five wards in the city.

Ten years ago a referendum was held here on the question of a commission form of government, with a city manager. The plan was defeated by a small majority.

The amended charter, under the plans now advanced, would be patterned after that of Lancaster, Pa., and several other Pennsylvania cities.

The mayor would receive a salary of $3,000 annually, instead of $1,800 as at present, while the three councilmen would receive $1,800 annually, instead of $600.

It is contended by those who are advocating the change that high-class business men could be induced to become candidates.

The plan also calls for the abolition of two commissions, the street and water, and two councilmen, at a savings of $4,460 annually, sufficient to meet the added expense of salaries for the mayor and three councilmen. Each of the councilmen would be assigned the duties now handled by the two commissions.

BENJAMIN DELAHAUF FOULOIS, major general, chief of U. S. Army Air Corps. Once the only Army pilot, instructor, navigator and observer, his is the longest flying career in the air service. Took flying instruction from the Wright brothers when this country bought its first military airplane. Rose through the ranks and active service in the Spanish-American War, the Philippines, and as chief of the air service during the World War, to the top of military aviation. Responsible for many improvements subsequently incorporated in planes. Paradoxically, he has been accused of "indiscretion" over the method of purchase of Army planes. But through it all, with the support of Secretary of War Dern, he has remained steadfast, unassuming and popular among his fellow officers. Expert pilot, he is modest, retiring, seeking always the welfare of others.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

As Quillen Looks at It

Fining Drivers for Scaring Horses Is Found Passe.

By Robert Quillen.

Dreamers in this and other lands have made numerous attempts to establish and maintain ideal communities, free of want and greed and competition. Soon or late, all of these plans failed. They contained within themselves the seed of their own destruction.

Brazil attempted to fix the price of coffee, England the price of rubber, America the price of cotton. Each attempts failed—more or less disastrously. Each plan contained elements that made it self-destructive.

Idealistic and artificial schemes of life seem to promise success because part of the elements that will affect them are overlooked, but always there are hidden elements that will destroy them.

Consider the matter of disarmament. Since war is wholly evil, it would seem the decent and logical thing to disarm. But if America should do it, other and smaller nations would quickly find some cause of offense and land troops to loot the country.

The same truth applies to the Christian life. While the Christian way of living is unnatural, in that it requires the suppression of natural impulses and passions, all men realize that it would solve the world's problems and make earth a paradise. Yet the few dare not live it, for they would be sheep among wolves—stripped of their last penny and left to beg or starve.

The only plan or way of life that can succeed in a hard world is one that takes account of realities—of human weakness and selfishness and greed.

Some of the schemes included in the New Deal were emergency measures that necessity required. Right or wrong, they were the less of two evils. Millions of jobless must somehow be fed to avert red ruin. The schemes worked, in spite of being arbitrary and artificial, because they were designed to offset and overcome an artificial condition.

But soon or late America must learn that no artificial plan can be permanently good. It violates natural law. It can't work because those it affects adversely will not play ball—and no power can overcome passive resistance.

Selfish desire is the dominant motive in every man's life and no economic or political scheme can endure unless it is based on that motive. If you doubt it, wait and see.

American Exiles—by Choice

In the obscure reaches of the Canadian Northwest . . . in far-off Shanghai . . . beneath the gilded temples of distant Bangkok . . . in the remote Fiji Islands . . . on the slopes of the Urals deep in Russia . . . live half a million Americans. Ranging in character from missionaries struggling to spread Christianity among the heathen to wealthy widows who choose to live abroad because of the gay life offered by Paris, the Riviera, Monte Carlo, they live in self-imposed exile.

In this Sunday's Post, Robert Talley writes an engaging, colorful story of these men and women who though they are spread over the face of the earth . . . yet are bound together by a common association with the country to which many of them may never return.

No End of Books

Novels for People Who Never Read Books, Being Tales Set From Georgia to England.

By Theodore Hall.

THE book-reviewer, I'd best be candid, is a little too prone to think that other people spend as much time reading books as he does. Which leaves him, no doubt, with his best audience among lighthouse keepers.

THEO. HALL.

But it's just as true that books get squeezed out of most people's lives as it is that movies get squeezed out of mine. I don't see one a month. So let's look hard at today's list of novels and try to find what is in them for people to whom books aren't a habit but a holiday.

Certainly a $10,000 prize novel should have glamour. Yet once the reader comes to the well of Mrs. L. M. Alexander's "Candy" (Dodd Mead, $2.50), he's pretty likely to drink deep of this tale of Georgia Negroes on a Savannah River plantation. It's full of gusty, carefree life—gay, that is, until Dick Clay comes down from Harlem and sets everything on its ears. The heroine, Candy, is live enough to step right out of the pages. She has her troubles, but she gets out of them so courageously that you'll want to cheer.

People from Georgia will find it familiar as a peach tree. Yet a lot of other readers will enjoy the book for its sheer power to transport them to a strange but satisfying scene. And if you like handsome books, chalk up another point for "Candy." It's got a pink polka-dot cover, and illustrations by Rockwell Kent.

* * * * *

A thousand miles north and three centuries earlier is something of a jump. Grace Zaring Stone's "The Cold Journey" (Morrow, $2.50) tells of a French and Indian raid on the colonial town of Deerfield, Mass., of the painful journey the captive Puritans had to make to Quebec, of their bitter life there, and of their sudden, joyous release. One woman fell in love with a French officer, another became an Indian squaw—that shows the range of their varied fates.

It happens that most of this is history. But Mrs. Stone makes it into a novel which will hold you on the edge of your chair. If you saw "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen," you'll have an idea of her talents. For she wrote the novel from which the movie was made. Some of you, indeed, may be her near neighbors—Mrs. Stone lives on Thirty-third street, the wife of a naval officer.

* * * * *

A young Irish woman, Kate O'Brien, startled the English book world two years ago by winning the Hawthornden Prize with her first novel, "Without My Cloak," a tale of Victorian Irishmen. She follows it now with "The Anteroom" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50), which takes you into the heart of the Mulqueen family, cousins of the Considines of the first book.

It's a serious, deeply moving story of the old standard triangle, complicated by an intense religious passion, which takes place while mother Teresa Mulqueen lies dying. You'll find it best for an evening at home when a touch of the spleen wants quieting.

* * * * *

Which reminds me that another common complaint is the feeling of being stuck in a rut where nothing ever happens. For this, let me prescribe Neil Bell's "Winding Road" (Little Brown, $2.75), the long, panoramic story of a young and usual Englishman to whom about everything happens. Don't expect fireworks—fireworks are an insult at such a time. Young Stephen Martell is close enough to us all to lead us easily and surely into his life with him.

* * * * *

But if you do want high seasoning, try Kathleen Shepard's "Weep For Me" (King, $2). A factory girl comes to live with a Sutton place family, and there's no telling what the little spitfire will do.

* * * * *

Another kind of pepper shaker will be found in Will Jenkin's "Fighting Horse Valley" (King, $2). Brave men and villainous fighting over a gold mine in the West of today will make it hard for you to keep your toupee in place—that is, if you have a toupee.

* * * * *

Still, the best thing a novel does is to show us ourselves. Ernest Pascal's "A Woman at Thirty" (Harcourt Bruce, $2), a lively but sharp tale of a woman who was at least successful in business, will hold up a mirror to many a reader.

Young men who, if pressed, will allow they've a touch of genius—they're as numerous as cranberries in a Cape Cod bog—had best look into Kenneth Britton's "And After That" (Bobbs Merrill, $2.50). Everyone said young O'Brien Jones was the coming American composer. How right everyone was makes a tale ranging from Rhode Island to Williams College, chock-full of very readable incidents. The moral is—Don't let too many people put their fingers in the pie.

Anyone looking back over his life is bound to be a little surprised at the way he turned out. Mona William's "Bright Is the Morning" (Smith & Haas, $2.50) looks back over the lives of three men—the seemingly tough, hard-minded man who began as a soft-hearted youth; the white-haired boy who didn't turn out so well; and the man who, helped by a good woman, climbed uphill all the way. Their lives are narrated backward, from the present to Princeton 30 years before. It's an odd way of telling a story, yet it makes an amazingly effective and memorable novel. Most men can find some part of themselves in these frank pages.

* * * * *

Comparison, I suppose, is odious, but I've been holding the best to the last. For the very reason that Constance Holme's "The Things Which Belong" attempts to do no more than tell the simple story of an English married couple—he home-loving, she wanting to roam—this little book gets right under the skin. Miss Holme wrote it in 1925; now it appears in the World's Classics series (Oxford U. Press, 80c.).

There isn't very much to the tale—except that it is profoundly true and revealing, and as wise as the world is wide.

Hospital in Winchester Named in Lines Will

Winchester, Oct. 11 (Spl.).—The Winchester Memorial Hospital was named as beneficiary in the will of Mrs. Virginia H. Lines, which has been admitted to probate in corporation court. After making cash bequests to a niece and two nephews, the will directed that the remainder of the estate be bequeathed to the trustees of Winchester Memorial Hospital for the benefit of needy patients. Maurice M. Lynch qualified as executor. His bond was set at $5,000.

Columbus.

It is probable that more inhabitants of the United States of America know the date 1492 better than they know the dates of the birthdays of members of their families.

At 2 o'clock in the morning of Friday, October 12, 1492, a sailor announced the appearance of land in the western world. Later in the morning, Columbus, dressed in formal and richly decorated garments, accompanied by many of the officers and crew, landed on the island and called it after the Saviour, San Salvador. They knelt in prayer and thanksgiving to God, even as the Pilgrims did, nearly 130 years later on the barren shore of Massachusetts; and they kissed the ground in the rapture of discovery and of safety. Many members of the crew that had wished to mutiny, knelt in tears at the feet of the admiral, beseeching pardon.

The three ships, with 88 men, had sailed from Europe at 8 in the morning of Friday, August 3. So they sailed on a Friday and landed on a Friday, after a voyage of about two months.

It is interesting to remember that although Columbus made four voyages while he was living, he also made a voyage to America and back after he was dead. He died May 20, 1506. His remains were taken from Valladolid to Seville. In 1542 they were taken up and carried across the ocean to Haiti, in 1793 taken to Cuba, and finally, after the Spanish-American War of 1898, removed to Seville Cathedral in Spain.

Columbus was between 40 and 50 when he discovered America. Italian by birth, his day is celebrated in more places and with more jubilation every year.

Great poets in all languages have celebrated the name and character and deeds of Columbus. In the nineteenth century, Tennyson and Walt Whitman both paid poetic tribute to his memory. Whitman's "Prayer of Columbus" is magnificent.

Schiller's poem on Columbus is one of the finest things he ever wrote. He put into it his own indomitable spirit: "Steure, Mutiger Segler" And among the best short poems of the late Vachel Lindsay is the following:

Would that we had the fortunes of Columbus,
Sailing his caravels a trackless way,
He found a Universe—he sought Cathay.
God give such dawns as when, his venture o'er,
The Sailor looked upon San Salvador.
God lead us past the setting of the sun
To wizard island, of august surprise;

Close Scrutiny Discloses That "Bring on the Girls" Is Not a Musical Opus

Cogent Satire Not Dependent On Chromatics

By Nelson B. Bell.

The most surprising piece of news at the moment, it seems to me, is the announcement by the Sam H. Harris office that "Bring On the Girls," by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Syskind, scheduled for the National Theater following Fred Stone in "Jayhawker," is not a musical piece.

In these columns, as well as other dedicated to the faithful reporting of affairs of the theater, this impending event was heralded as something handsomely tricked out with tunes, dances and what have you in the way of a sophisticated entertainment.

And now comes the blow-off, in a manner of speaking.

Mr. John Peter Toohey, an erstwhile contributor to the Saturday Evening Post, an exceptionally cogent observer of the passing scene in the land of "Let's Pretend," a showman, whose talents have not been entirely lost by Mr. Harris' silent scrutinies, informs me, during the course of an enjoyable personal conversation that this is one of the most interesting contacts that he has encountered.

"Bring On the Girls," it appears, is a story that will appeal to the average theatergoer. It has color, movement and action, and also a lot of feminine pulchritude that has no bearing on the story. This is what makes it so intriguing. It has never been done before in just this fashion.

This Mr. John Peter Toohey, who years ago was a feature writer on this paper and since has been a chronicler of parts, is responsible for the story, "Bring On the Girls."

There is nothing musical about this opus, but there is a great deal that is satirically and hysterically funny.

All of these attributes will be apparent to those who buy their tickets early.

First Banquet.

Announcements of standing committees which will handle the first annual banquet of Variety Club, Tent No. 11, at the Willard Hotel on the evening of November 24, were announced by John J. Payette, general chairman, yesterday.

The dinner committee is headed by Julian Brylawski, with J. Louis Rome, vice chairman, and Nat B. Browne, secretary.

S. A. Galanty has been appointed chairman of the finance committee. Assisting him are L. Garman, C. E. McGowan, J. Makover and J. J. Payette.

Admissions to this banquet will be handled by Sam Wheeler, while assisting him will be Sam Bac, Louis Bernheimer, H. S. Brown, Frank Durkee, R. M. Grace, Bob Folliard, Sidney Lust, William B. Wolf, Hunter Perry and G. A. Crouch.

Members of the publicity committee are Lou Brown, chairman, Nelson Bell, William Ewing, Don Craig, Andy Kelly, Edward deS. Melcher, Mason Peters and Vincent Callahan.

The banquet on November 24, will be the first to be held by the local Variety Club. Under the present plans, there will be a representative dinner, followed by entertainment and dancing and ending with the serving of breakfast the following morning.

Variety Club is composed of those executives and their associated who are connected with motion picture theaters, films and the legitimate theater.

It may be your feet.

Last night, not once but many times, the Hecht Co. ran off a film in Room 128 of the Willard, suggestive of what might be done in case of trouble with the "dogs" in a manner of speaking.

Mr. M. W. Locke was the star of this exposure. He twisted feet like nobody's business and corrected a countless number of malformations springing from the impairment of the functions of the pedal extremities.

If all that ails your feet cannot be remedied by Fr. Locjr then it is just too bad!

Since three of the five scenes taking place in a senatorial home in Washington during the Civil War, this city should be looking forward with a special interest to the imminent production of "Jayhawker," the new drama by Sinclair Lewis and Lloyd Lewis, which Henry Hammond, Inc., will present at the National Theater on Monday evening, October 15th, a week's engagement prior to its opening in New York. Fred Stone is the star and his daughter, Carol, will be seen in the leading feminine role.

But it will not be a mere reproduction of phases of Washington with which inhabitants might be assumed to be familiar; the picture, instead, is of the city when it was possibly just as stormy as it is today, but certainly less civilized.

The period is the Civil War, and the story is of the first Senator from Kansas, a State which had just been admitted to the Union. "Ace" Burdette, the magnificent blusterer of the title, is the character Fred Stone will offer as his first interpretation on the legitimate stage.

Every one is familiar with the incomparable clowning of this song-and-dance man; he has been in every branch of the theater from tent shows to vaudeville tours and long-run musical comedies. But a sustained performance in a sustained story is a new step for this distinguished comic—and the same kind of revelation is due as came forth with the entrance of George M. Cohan and James Barton onto the acting platform.

Car Standards Improve.

Richmond, Oct. 10. (AP).—Semi-annual inspections have shown a progressively higher standard of mechanical condition for automobiles operated in Virginia, Capt. H. R. Nicholas, superintendent of the State traffic patrol of the motor vehicle division, said today.

Stars on Next Week's Screens

Straight From the Studios

More of James Hilton's Novels Find Way to Screen; Rudy Vallee Goes West for More Film Work; Chatter of the Gelatin City.

By Philip K. Scheuer
(Pinch Hitting for Edwin A. Schallert).

Hollywood, Oct. 10.—Popularity of James Hilton novels with the studios again is shown by M-G-M's purchase of "Dawn of Reckoning." No further plans have been revealed, but the studio reports the yarn an unusual psychological drama.

The same studio previously acquired rights to "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," also by Hilton. But still unpurchased is his "Ill Wind," which this column hailed months ago as just the thing the studios have been looking for. "Ill Wind" is a revival of the one-locale "Grand Hotel" angle, with a list of characters scattered to the four corners of the earth, all reacting, by a series of coincidences, one upon another.

NOVARRO.

Athletic Stories Inspired.

It must be open season for athletics. Warner Brothers have purchased "Sport Page," by Clarence Bricker, New York sports writer. The story gives the lowdown on professional shenanigans, as seen through the eyes of a reporter.

Connolly Signed For Dances.

The same company has presented Bobby Connolly with a long term contract. Connolly, with a distinguished record as a director of ensembles for Ziegfeld and others, has devised the dances for two of Warners' forthcoming musicals, "Flirtation Walk," the Hawaiian-West Point romance, and Jerome Kern's operetta of old New York, "Sweet Adeline."

Rudy Arriving To Star for Warners.

Rudy Vallee, last seen as one of the mainstays of George White's "Scandals," returns to town Sunday to perform before the microphones for Warners. Vallee is bringing his Connecticut Yankees with him, and they will go into "Sweet Music" immediately.

Berkeley Shows Up Again.

Reginald Berkeley, British author and playwright, usually may be depended upon to pop up when Winfield Sheehan and Fox are about to attempt one of those super-super affairs. Berkeley did the scripts on "Cavalcade" and "The World Moves On." He has just returned from three months in England, and Sheehan, also a returning traveler, is expected within a few days. Just what the pair may be concocting is unknown at this stage of the game.

New Week Is a Field Day for Picture Hits

Varied Programs Offered in Theaters for the Impending Week.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

"Jayhawker," the new play by Sinclair and Lloyd Lewis—not related—to be presented in the National Theater next week, beginning Monday night, is the first drama of the Civil War that has not expressed itself in terms of romantic melodrama. In place of that conventional treatment, this play will offer a realistic version of certain aspects of the conflict between the States which will be comparable to the reflection of the Great War that was afforded by "What Price Glory."

Fred Stone, former musical comedy star, who makes his debut as a serious actor in this Henry Hammond, Inc., production, will appear in the title role, supported by his daughter, Carol, Walter C. Kelly, "The Virginia Judge," and a long cast of distinguished players. The usual matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

• • • •

Harold Lloyd will be seen in a new type of vehicle, for him, when "The Cat's Paw" is presented as chief film feature of the bill at Loew's Fox Theater next week, beginning Friday. In this subject, adapted from the story by Clarence Budington Kelland, the bespectacled comedian makes his debut as an interpreter of plays with dramatic continuity as opposed to episodic "gag" construction. The innovation is attended by the utmost success, take it from one who has seen the picture. In this comedy of the son of a Chinese missionary who revolutionizes American political practices, Lloyd strikes a new and hilarious note. He is supported by Una Merkel, Alan Dinehart, George Barbier, Nat Pendleton, J. Farrell MacDonald, Warren Hymer and a score of others. The stage bill will be headlined by Eleanor Powell, greatest of the feminine tap dancers.

• • • •

The literary skill of Edith Wharton will be reflected on the screen of RKO-Keith's Theater next week, beginning Friday, when the chief feature of the bill will be "The Age of Innocence," in which John Boles and Irene Dunne are presented as costars. In this romantic tale of a mad infatuation the most mature performances of a pair of costars of wide popularity will be disclosed. Lionel Atwill, Laura Hope Crews and Helen Westley lead the supporting cast. The surrounding bill will include short-reel subjects of the first rank.

• • • •

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," one of the most notable of the current season's releases, will be continued as a downtown, first-run attraction at Loew's Columbia Theater next week, beginning Friday, with Norma Shearer, Frederic March and Charles Laughton in the featured roles, supported by Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Forbes and a strong cast. Abbreviated camera subjects will augment the bill.

• • • •

The Metropolitan Theater, intent on extracting the last drop of blood from "Belle of the Nineties," latest of the vehicles for Mae West, will carry on for the platinum blonde until something better comes along—which seems a long way off. Roger Pryor, Johnny Mack Brown, John Miljan and a number of others complete a bill of some importance.

• • • •

At the Gayety next week, beginning with the customary performance Sunday afternoon, the attraction will be "Paris Nights," in which the principal roles will be played by Billy Arlington, Nora Murray and Milma Horber.

• • • •

At the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater next week, beginning Friday, that baby prodigy, Shirley Temple, again will demonstrate with what aplomb she is able to dominate a picture by stealing the acting honors from Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard, in "Now and Forever," a screen subject in which the foremost of the juveniles once more asserts her supremacy over the tawdry business of crookdom. Gary Cooper is cast as her dad and Miss Lombard as her foster mother in a picture that also affords Sir Guy Standing a splendid opportunity. On the stage, Irene Beasley, the tall songstress from the Southland, will headline the bill. The usual house features will augment the program.

$6000 WAS THE TOTAL COST OF COLUMBUS' DISCOVERY OF AMERICA... HIS SALARY WAS $270...
Christopher COLUMBUS WAS THE FIRST ALIEN DEPORTED FROM AMERICA!
THIS BRITISH STAMP OF 1903 SHOWS COLUMBUS LOOKING THROUGH A TELESCOPE... .. AN INSTRUMENT THAT WAS NOT INVENTED UNTIL 100 YEARS LATER...
10-12-34 McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

Strange as it seems, the man who discovered America was the first alien to be deported from the New World—ignominiously sent back to Spain in chains.

Christopher Columbus who, 442 years ago today rediscovered America, was sent back to Spain in irons eight years after his famous discovery trip of 1492. This occurred after he had made his third voyage to the New World, on which he set out in May, 1498, sailing on a southerly course to Trinidad and thence along the coast of South America.

He then sailed to Espanola and to the settlement of Santo Domingo, which was the chief settlement in the Indies. Here he found the people in disorder and unrest. Vainly he tried to restore peace and order, but he proved to be a failure as an administrator. In the meantime both sides sent agents to Spain to lay their grievances before King Ferdinand.

As a result the king named Francisco de Bobadilla to succeed Columbus as governor of the colony. Bobadilla, upon his arrival, ordered Columbus under arrest and sent him back to Spain in chains without making due inquiry into the charges against him.

• • • •

Researches into the cost of Columbus' first expedition to the New World indicate that the whole outlay for the voyage was only about $6,000. The initial cost of providing the ships amounted to about $2,300; rations, salaries and other expenses were $3,700.

Tomorrow: A $30,000,000 per pound substance that turns to lead.

Walt Mason, Himself

Untimely Optimism.

When heat was blistering the earth with all the vigor it could bring, our village optimist, Bill Worth, was telling us to smile and sing. He handed us a rigamarole that we believed was not good form; "We do not have to purchase coal to keep our shacks and wigwams warm; it's buying coal that keeps us broke, that brings deep furrows to the face, that puts our household goods in soak, and puts a mortgage on the place. Our furnaces are all run down, our stoves are empty, red with rust, and yet we yammer through the town to voice our anger and disgust. We're saving money every day, because we do not puchase coal; we're salting needed dimes away, and that should cheer the downcast soul. How thankful, truly, we should be, for all this carnival of heat; we look around us and we see our neighbors baking on their feet. They're sending up loud wails of woe, forgetting ills they now avoid; no doubt at times they've shoveled snow, but now they are not thus employed. It is indeed a beastly task in which to spend a frigid day; there's nothing better man could ask than heat to melt the snow away. They do not fall upon the ice and slide some 700 feet, this fact alone should well suffice to make them thankful for the heat." Sometimes the optimist enjoys the warm applause good words entail, and then again the wearied boys go forth and ride him on the rail.

Smart Dinner-Dance Spots Brighten City's Night Life

By Kay Ware.

Loewenkeller is dead—long live Club Habana! Bavaria is a long way from Mexico, Club Habana is as far removed from the old Loewenkeller. However, when the South American spot is opened to the public, will the strains of "Cavalier, stein of beer," filter into the newest tango? Will ghosts of the bare-kneed waiters hide in the Spanish corners? Will German accents slip into the hum of conversation? Will the curly-tailed lion haunt the Mexican walls?

Manager Guy Scott says no. Club Habana will make you forget there was ever such a place as a Bavarian garden. Opening of this new spot is set near Halloween.

Brooke John's Barn is just the place to spend an informal evening. Who can be stiff and conventional in a barn? And a real barn it is, with remains of a hayloft, ox yokes for lighting fixtures, stone steps leading down to an old cellar and an orchestra attired in straw hats, blue overalls and red bandana handkerchiefs.

As far as the host goes, Brooke Johns needs no introduction. Washingtonians follow his activities with interest.

Pierre's, on Connecticut avenue, is open for the winter season. If your tastes run toward French delicacies, try a dinner at Pierre's. Pierrette for cocktail hour or luncheon.

More French cooking at L'Escargot. A chef that is an artist means dinners that are an experience.

Notables seen at the Shoreman: New Brazilian Ambassador, Senor Oswaldo Aranha, and members of embassy staff; the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Fernando Gonzalez Roa, with a small party; Dr. Henri de Bayle, charge d'affaires of the Nicaraguan Legation; Senor Rodriguez, of the Chilean Embassy. Non-diplomatic guests included Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Teagle (Standard Oil), Mr. Newbold Noyes and Mr. Frank Phillips, Oklahoma oil producer.

Discrimination.

These orchids and engagement rings
All represent the better things
In life, and yet I want no strings
Attached, for there are better things
Than orchids and engagement rings.

More Spanish. Casa Rita, just up a flight from the highly Americanized Childs, combines gingham dresses and Spanish shawls just to remind you that it's the Gingham Club.

If you sit on the far side of the room and squint your eyes carefully you can easily imagine you're on the edge of a hot desert. The perspective through the Mexican archway is realistic. Fortunately you won't be troubled with sandstorms, for Casa Rita is an oasis.

H-m-m. Hammers are banging at the old Troica. Whispers are going around it's to be Club International, or something. Maybe that means they'll leave the Russian paintings on the walls, the gilt on the French chairs, add a Spanish dance team, an Italian chef, and a headwaiter with a German accent. Nor do we mean to omit Egypt, South Africa, Finland or the tropics. Just a speculation after all.

Hi-Hat is sprouting extra feathers for the winter season. New decorations, new and interesting items on the cocktail list, new people seen sipping make it a place to take your smartest friend.

The music furnished is a combination of the latest tunes and those old favorites that make you want to drop a tear on the highly polished table top. Go to Hi-Hat for smiles and sighs.

Exoticism and excitement at the Javanese Ball Room. Maryland Club Gardens manages to accommodate many guests and, at the same time, carpenters, architects, painters, decorators and accessories to the building of the new cabaret.

Another restaurant opens. The Cherry Blossom is the name.

Thum Nail Cameos.

Phillipe Borgia, now dancing at Heigh-Ho, says he married Marjorie Enters for professional as well as sentimental reasons. Of course, they are very much in love, but offers from Hollywood to Miss Enters hastened his proposal. They've been married two weeks.

Miss Enters is Viennese by birth. What is it about Vienna and beautiful women? She was educated in Wales. Hence her charming manner of speech. She had to do a lot of changing of name because her former last one was long, German and almost unpronounceable. First two are Margarita Zoe.

Phillipe Borgia's birthplace was Turino, Italy. He danced with Mae Murray, Barbara Bennett and several others, then met Marjorie in Paris. She had been doing concert work.

So they came to America as Zoe and Phillipe, then to Bermuda, then to fill European engagements, then Montreal and Philadelphia.

By this time, Zoe and Phillipe were known as Enters and Borgia. It was at the Black-Hawk Restaurant in Chicago that Pete Macias saw and remembered them, then brought them to Heigh-Ho.

You should see Miss Enters in her long black velvet wrap that reaches form chin to toe. What was that about Vienna——?

For a quiet place to give a private party, call the Parrot. It's a convenient place to stop for luncheon after strenuous uptown shopping.

The lady in profile is Judy Ellington, now a permanent member of Bill Strickland's Capitolians at the Lotus. The other, with the Joan Crawford expression, is Marion Field, singing at Club Michel.

Greenecastle Firemen Protest Prize Award

Greencastle, Pa., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—The Rescue Hose Company here has protested the award of a $25 prize to the Northampton (Pa.) Fire Company for having the oldest piece of fire apparatus exhibited in the State firemen's parade last Thursday at Sunbury, Pa.

The Greencastle company, which has won many prizes with its hand-operated pumper, built in 1741, asserts that apparatus of the type exhibited by the Northampton company was not manufactured prior to 1741.

Camp Planned For Transients Near Lee Hall

Self-Sustaining Project Is Aim of Virginia Relief Group.

Richmond, Oct. 11 (AP).—Plans for establishment of a specialized camp for transients at Camp Eustis, near Lee Hall, Va., were announced today by the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration.

The property, now being used as a Federal detention camp, is equipped with barracks, shops and acreage sufficient for a farm of considerable size and it is proposed to make it a self-sustaining project.

"Under the present set-up," a VERA official said today, "little opportunity is afforded men in transient centers to do more than a few hours or days work per week on some sort of manual project. We have many men of more than ordinary talent and ability registered at our shelters and camps, and unless some outlet for their abilities is found, they will deteriorate.

"The center at camp Custis will draw these selected men from other centers in the region and provide them with tasks commensurate, in some measure at least, with their abilities. It is hoped thereby to conserve their ability, and even to improve upon it, until such time as it can be reabsorbed by society."

This is the first camp of its kind established anywhere in the country by the transient service and, while regional in scope, drawing men from Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, it will be operated with Federal funds, but through the Virginia office of the transient service.

It will have physical accommodations for 2,000, but that number hardly will be concentrated there at any time in the near future. If the experiment succeeds, similar centers are planned for other parts of the country, officials said.

Salisbury Driver Gives Himself Up

Ready to Serve Year for Injuring 20.

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—T. Walton Toadvine, of near here, who recently was fined $100 in people's court and sentenced to a year in the Maryland House of Correction after his car ran wild in the streets of Salisbury, has withdrawn his appeal and surrendered himself to the court.

Toadvine, whose car injured a score of shoppers some time ago, has been out on $7,000 bond pending the appeal. State's Attorney L. Claude Bailey, however, said that 14 additional charges of assault still will stand against Toadvine.

The prison sentence was imposed by the court on conviction of driving while intoxicated and reckless driving, and the defense counsel asked for a jury trial on the assault charges, which are now moved up to the circuit court.

Governors to Attend Highway Celebration

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—Governors Peery, of Virginia, and Kump, of West Virginia, have indicated they will attend the celebration of the opening of the highway connecting Harrisonburg with Franklin, the Pendleton County, W. Va., county seat, in a few weeks.

This highway had been sought by Rockingham interests for years, but it is not until this year that they were successful. West Virginia finished its side of the Shenandoah mountain stretch a year ago. Harrisonburg business men visited the West Virginia area yesterday, and invited their neighbors to the celebration. In the party were 31 men headed by Weldon W. Berry, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Michael Macwhite Returns From Ireland

Wife of Irish Free State Minister Spent Four Months Painting in Rural Sections of Country; Plans Exhibition in Winter or Spring.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

After an absence of four months in Ireland, Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State, has returned to Washington and joined Mr. MacWhite in their apartment at the Shoreham. Mrs. MacWhite, who is Danish by birth, usually spends her summers on the Continent, but this summer she decided to visit her husband's country and do some paintings of rural Ireland. Mrs. MacWhite is an accomplished artist, and last spring had a successful exhibition in Washington. Her paintings are principally landscapes of the European countries where she has lived and visited. Her coloring and use of the brush are both strong and firm for a woman, and the scenes she has chosen show the true artist.

Mrs. MacWhite had never learned to drive a car, so last spring, before leaving Washington, she took some lessons, found herself very proficient at the wheel, and bought a small car with which she sailed for the Emerald Isle. Traffic was her main problem, so on her arrival in Cork she employed a chauffeur to drive her beyond the city limits, and there she took the wheel.

She had learned to drive in this country—on the right side of the road—and the left-handed traffic of the other side of the ocean was disconcerting. When straying cattle, chickens and horses in the Irish rural districts were added to this, the problem became a large one, until by sheer perseverance, Mrs. MacWhite overcame these obstacles.

Sometimes Painted All Day.

From Cork she went to Schull, on the south coast of Ireland, and after stopping for a few days to paint the rugged beauty of the coast, continued around the south of the island and up the west coast. Stopping at small inns, with an occasional larger hostelry, Mrs. MacWhite wended her way around the coast of Ireland. On some rather glorious days she breakfasted early, packed a picnic luncheon in her car, with easels, sketch books and paints, and went off for a whole day of work. Often she returned to her inn for a very late dinner, and immediately to bed. The twilight in Ireland lasts until 10 or 11 o'clock at night, and so Mrs. MacWhite never found it necessary to turn on a light.

During her stay in Ireland, Mrs. MacWhite painted about 30 canvases, a number of them being only half finished, awaiting her time during a busy winter to complete the work for another exhibition she hopes to have either this winter or next spring.

Yesterday, at her apartment in the Shoreham, Mrs. MacWhite received me to talk of her trip, and I found her most charming with a new style of coiffure; soft, curling banks lending the only frivolous touch to a severely simple hairdress. Her frock of black crepe, with a long tunic of black and white print, was ornamented with tiny Chinese frogs of black silk.

Met in N. Y. by Minister.

Mrs. MacWhite arrived in New York last week, where she was met by the Minister, and they came to Washington together Sunday. A few of the canvases painted last summer were in the drawing room, among them an interesting picture of the interior of a peasant cottage, in rich brown coloring, with an old lady seated beside a meager fire burning on the great hearth.

Another painting shows the road through a village street leading past neat white cottages to the blue sea beyond, with the mountains dimly outlining the cove, while still another shows the sea in a turbulent mood, dashing against the dark rocks. In one painting an ancient bridge arching a stream is reflected in the water with the trees and small houses along the bank.

Mrs. MacWhite finds time, with her many duties as a diplomatic hostess, to continue her work even during the season, and her next exhibition is looked forward to with eagerness by those who attended last spring's.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

The Simpsons (Betsy and Frances) are about to give another of their nice informal "soirees" Sunday evening. There will be singing, dancing, games and what will you. I think it will closely resemble a conference of sorts, what with all the military "young wigs" present.

Speaking of military reminds me that the hills and dales in the nearby countryside have been filled with the "slide-rule" troops from Humphreys and the equestrian units from Myer. That, no doubt, is the complete and adequate explanation of the absence from our midst of a number of dashing young lieutenants.

Katherine Friant, who is Trinity-ing and debut-ing this year, is busy shopping for a special tea gown to wear when, with 19 other girls, she will assist at Mrs. Neitah King's tea on the eighteenth.

"Smokey," the Pekingese, and the glorious yellow Persian were the hits of the evening at Randolph Richardson's party the other night. Although mingling with the guests, the two pets stalked (the latter) and waddled (the former) about, aloof and haughty. However, they finally condescended to accept the friendship of Silvine Clagett and Jack Cremen. (I really believe that the Persian, conscious of his colors, found Silvine's green frock a very delightful background for his orange).

Church Alliance To Mark Birthday

Thoms and Mrs. May Jameson Bryant. A decorated birthday cake with ten candles will be lighted by ten past presidents. There will be songs by Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Tighe.

At 2:30 p. m. Dr. H. C. Bryant, assistant director of the National Park Service, will show a series of motion pictures. It is expected more than 200 will be present.

American Women Can Learn Much From the Chinese, Says Wife of Publisher

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: The articles in your column have been so interesting that I felt I should like to have your advice on my problem.

Recently I read the beautiful life experience of Mrs. Edison, who said her greatest happiness had been in furthering the career of her husband and making his home life as pleasant as possible. This recalled to my mind the young man who wrote your column recently that he wishes to meet girls who are more interested in good literature, poetry and music, good movies and plays, than in drinking, smoking and the continuous pleasure-seeking activities which so often we call "having a good time."

* * * *

I know there are many young girls who could be happy doing what Mrs. Edison has done, if they might only find the man who really holds love, marriage and home as something sacred and precious. It has been my privilege to see a few such happy marriages, but there are so many others for whom marriage has turned promised happiness into bitterness, that I'm beginning to wonder if it is worth while to keep on seeking the ideal I've always hoped to find.

* * * *

Perhaps I am too serious about such things, but please don't tell me people don't have such ideas today. Since I am only 23, maybe I yet have time to find my ideal.

* * * *

I have been in Washington nearly a year and, while I have made friends with a number of young girls, I have been unable to meet fellows who would make congenial friends. I like to hike, play tennis, dance or just talk, and I like music and plays. You have suggested joining a State club. Can you tell me if there is an Ohio State Club and how you join? I belong to a church here and go to the young people's meetings, and also have a group of girls from an orphanage with whom I go on picnics and hikes.

* * * *

I don't know if I have made myself clear except that I hope somehow you can show me a way to make friends with folks who like everyday things, and I hope to find the road to happiness. PEG.

Hold Fast to Ideals.

DEAR PEG: There is an Ohio State Society in Washington, as well as an Ohio Girls' Club. I do not have the names of the officers of the State society, but Miss Anna Park, whose residence is listed as Hotel Bellevue, is president of the girls' club.

* * * *

There is no "open sesame" formula for meeting and cultivating friendships among congenial young men in a new community where one is without social acquaintances and without forthright letters of introduction. In such instances, lasting and worth-while friendships develop rather slowly, and the material must be looked for in the field of one's everyday associates.

* * * *

One's first business, of course, is to make one's self as attractive as possible in personality, mentality and appearance. The importance of exquisite grooming can not be overstressed; nor can the attributes of poise, tact, good temper, unaffected manner and a genuine interest in others. Add to this an intellectual curiosity toward life and a fastidious discrimination in the matter of choosing intimates, and it is practically impossible to escape making friends.

* * * *

Some occupation must have brought you to Washington. Your days are no doubt spent in some office of organization. Develope and apply your technique of friend-making on those about you, at home and in business. Don't wait for Providence to send you a fairy prince riding on a richly caparisoned charger, figuratively speaking. Things just don't happen that way in this modern world.

* * * *

Concerning the advisability of holding fast to certain ideals concerning love, marriage and men, I believe it is the beginning of wisdom to do so. Only by doing so can one hope to achieve a satisfactory—if not an ideal—reality. One must hitch one's wagon to a star before one can reach even the nearest planet. Not to do so is to remain forever mired in sordid compromise. M. H.

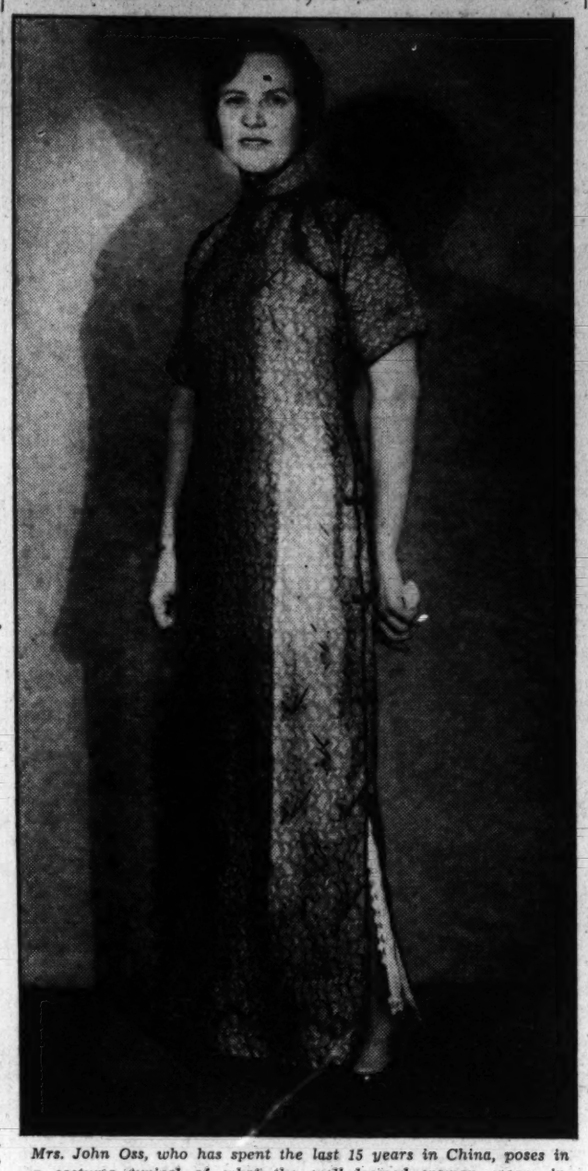
Orientals Retain Slenderness With No Effort, States Mrs. Oss



Mrs. John Oss, who has spent the last 15 years in China, poses in a costume typical of what the well-dressed woman wears in Shanghai when she goes out to tea or to play mah jong.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

AFTER 15 years in China, Mrs. John Oss, now visiting in Washington, admits she has succumbed completely to the lure of the East.

"So much so, I'd rather spend the remainder of my days in China than anywhere else in the world," she said yesterday, as she recounted some of her experiences in the Orient.

The wife of John Oss, head of the publishing department, China division, of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, she has done much toward raising funds for the erection and maintenance of hospitals and clinics in China. This work has led her to be associated with the higher, wealthier persons in China. So it was not the lower class depicted in Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth" that she discussed yesterday, but rather men and women who represent the upper social strata of the lotus land.

Middle Class Negligible.

"It seems," she said, "people in China are either very poor or very rich. What corresponds to the middle class in this country is almost a negligible number there. In raising funds for hospitals I have, naturally, become acquainted with moneyed men and women, and I am convinced there are no finer or more genial persons in the world than upper-class Chinese.

"They are generous, highly educated and surprisingly well informed on world affairs. Chinese men are as courteous and considerate as any American man. Chinese women are as attractive as any women in the world."

In this respect, she pointed out, American women could learn much from the Chinese.

"For the Oriental woman retains her slenderness with apparently no effort, and she is as well dressed in her silk, high-necked robe and her spike-heeled shoes as any Parisian," Mrs. Oss pointed out. "She is as interested in fashions as the average woman, and while there aren't so many different styles for her to choose from each season, she is greatly concerned with whether the butterfly sleeves of her summer robes will be wide or narrow, long or short, and whether the slit in her skirt will be just up to her knee (or, rather, well past it) as about who will attend her mah-jong or tea parties.

Selecting Winter Attire.

"Just now, Chinese women are choosing materials for their trousered winter street costumes. When I left Shanghai in June, they were still selecting the silk for their summer robes and for their lace-trimmed or tatting-edged petticoats. The latter, incidentally, are just about as important as the outer robes, for the slit skirts are designed to reveal what is worn under each of them.

"The Chinese woman is unusually discriminating about her attire. Her clothes are of excellent quality and beautifully made. Her pearls and her jade are genuine. Her hair is well-groomed and her nails are perfectly kept."

Mrs. Oss also emphasized the fact that the Chinese woman of high class has other, more important characteristics that enhance her attractiveness. She is educated, cultured and an excellent conversationalist.

"And she has been taught from babyhood to make the best of everything, to respect her elders, and to center her interests around her home," Mrs. Oss added.

Shocked by U. S. Films.

"No wonder then, when she attends theaters showing American films, she is shocked. No wonder she opens her little slant eyes a shade wider and shakes her sleek head at what she believes is a true portrayal of marital life in the United States.

"Yet she continues to go to the theaters, drawn, probably, by a natural curiosity to learn more about Western women who marry one month, get a divorce the next and shout the details of their marital discord for all ears to hear. This is so thoroughly out of keeping with Chinese ideals, natives can hardly believe what they see on the screen could really happen; for both men and women in China still adhere to the belief of their forefathers in regard to marriage and the home."

Marriage is still the sole aim of every Chinese girl, she explained, and it is generally considered a pity if she isn't a bride by the time she is 20. Weddings, in the majority of cases, are still arranged by parents, because respect for the wisdom of one's elders is, as it has always been, a salient characteristic of Chinese youth.

"After marriage," said Mrs. Oss, "the Oriental woman devotes most of her time to making her home attractive. And to have a table full of children—and a Chinese table ordinarily provides places for ten persons—is the ambition of every woman in that country.

Retain Slender Figures.

"Yet, despite the fact that Chinese women have many, many children, they retain their slender figures, their doll-like features—minus double chins—and take as much pride in their appearance as they did before their marriage.

"A woman of 40 going out to a mah jong party or serving tea to her friends is just as attractive as her 20-year-old daughter or her 1-year-old grandson. And she gets much more attention than either because the silver threads in her hair indicate that she is wise, that her counsel is worth a great deal. Furthermore, she is accorded every courtesy because she is a grandmother. And what a dainty, well-dressed and well-groomed grandmother she is!"

Mrs. Oss' enthusiasm for China is not confined, however, to her admiration for the women.

"China is so much more exciting than the United States," she declared. "Going from one city to another there is as thrilling as traveling from one country to another. No two communities are alike. No two persons, in fact, are alike.

"Of course I enjoy coming back to the United States for a visit. But to tell the truth, I don't feel nearly as safe here as in China. Yes, I know there are upheavals, revolutions and bandits in that big, badly-governed country, but in my 15 years of traveling all over China, I have never been molested. I couldn't have led a safer existence even in my native Nebraska."

Mrs. Oss and her husband will return to Shanghai in December.

Small Budget Beauty Aid If Used Wisely

All in Knowing How to Make Most of a Few Good Preparations.

By Frances Mangum.

MANY beauty budgets are limited now, but the woman with the small income can be equally as lovely as the one with unlimited means at her disposal. It's all in knowing how to get the most out of what you have.

Take, for example, a woman who can afford to buy—and does—the best powders, creams and lotions on the market today. Her dressing table is literally loaded down with expensive cosmetics and looks like a miniature display counter. One would immediately suppose that here is a woman who must be beautifully groomed. But on the contrary. She knows little of the fundamental facts of beauty care and uses her cream at random, now one, now another, and even then not consistently. She is so busy with a constant round of entertainments that all too often she neglects even to cleanse her face at night.

On the other hand, there is the young woman whose budget is extremely limited. Knowing she can afford but a few beauty preparations she has chosen wisely and employs them well. On her dressing table is a three-purpose cream which cleanses, nourishes, and stimulates all at the same time. It was an expensive jar but she uses it carefully, never wasting any. Her powder, too, costs more than average but it is finely sifted. She is sure it will not enlarge her pores and cause blackheads as some poorer powders might.

Instead of a powder puff, which is liable to become caked, she uses cotton pads upon which she depends to be always clean and sanitary. Before applying her rouge she makes sure that her fingertips are thoroughly washed. The puff to her compact she washes twice a week, just as she does her comb and brush.

Having taken cleanliness as her creed she maintains it and, building on this basis, accomplishes more with her scant supply than the woman who has much and does little with it.

Madeline Slade Seeks New Gandhi Disciples

New York, Oct. 11 (Spl.).—Out to win new disciples for Gandhi is Madeline Slade, daughter of the late Sir Esmond Slade, of the British navy.

Miss Slade, who has just arrived in New York, has been a disciple and confidant of the mahatma since 1925. While in this country she will give a series of lectures on Gandhi and India.

What Today Means

"Libra."

IF OCTOBER 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 1:45 to 3:45 p. m. and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 11:45 a. m. to 1:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m.

Courage, not of the physical but moral variety, may be required to face certain issues which may arise on this date but which can be successfully met if handled honestly and fearlessly. Nothing can ever be gained by trying to avoid confronting an event which will keep coming up, until a satisfactory conclusion is reached.

Business deals which have been pending for some time might be helped by personal contact, as individualism will play an important part in deciding commercial policies. Officials and office managers should warn subordinates contacting with the public to refrain from being abrupt or rude, for any form of churlishness is likely to prove costly. It might be well to remember clerical help usually follow the example set by their superiors.

A person in whom you have the greatest amount of confidence will probably offer you some excellent advice, which, if followed, might keep you from making a serious mistake. It might be advisable to confine social activities to outside of business hours, if business men or women are expecting to participate, for any neglect of duties will possibly result in complications. Married and engaged couples, as well as those wooing, will have a happier day if they practice the greatest amount of consideration for each other's feelings and wishes in trifling as well as important matters.

If a woman and October 12 is your birthday, an inquisitive disposition is apt to lead to many strange and interesting adventures, or the accumulation of a vast store of unusual information on many subjects. You might commercialize your knowledge advantageously through writing. Travel should have a strong appeal for you and should prove beneficial. Guard against the spirit of adventure tempting you to grow careless of the rules of conventionality. You should be able to gain a great deal of happiness through marriage.

The child born on October 12, when it reaches its 'teens, should display a great amount of eagerness to assimilate knowledge, not so much through textbooks, as by personal experiences or verbal information furnished by older people. This trait should be encouraged.

If a man and October 12 is your natal day, sooner or later you will be able to advantageously make use of amassed data you have either deliberately or subconsciously acquired. You have great money-making possibilities and in spite of obstacles should see your dreams come true.

Special Classes Aid Partly-Blind Children

Books With Very Large Type, Yellow Chalk Easier to Read and Trained Teachers Help These Youngsters to Advance Mentally.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

DAYS WHEN their eyes ached from trying to see print too fine for them to read; moments of agonized embarrassment when other children taunted them because they were "left back" when promotion cards were handed out; failure and disappointment and helpless rebellion—all these were commonplaces in the lives of Washington's "partially-seeing" children before they were put in special classes at the Henry School last February.

"This school is so much nicer, no one teases me about not seeing very well here," confided one little girl at the school yesterday.

"They didn't really tease you about your eyes?" her horrified questioner exclaimed.

"Oh, always," she answered.

But as magically as if some one had changed the thick lenses in their glasses to rose color, life has become warm and friendly for these handicapped girls and boys.

Study in Cheerful Room.

Now they all study together in a cheerful room. Their books have very large type so they can read without straining their eyes, their desks are fitted with special adjustable tops so they can hold the books close to their faces. They write on blackboards with yellow chalk because it is easy to read. The pieces of chalk are nice and fat, easy to find, and not easily broken when clutched by nervous little fingers.

"These children can only see a fourth as well as the person with ordinary vision, even when they wear glasses," explained Miss Bertha Taylor, principal of the school. "And although they are intelligent and many of them gifted, they didn't progress in their school work. They got the habit of failure, became sullen and rebellious, problem children.

"But over here they are happy. They progress just as fast as the children in the other grades, and when their eyes get better they will be able to continue with the other children of their age."

Transportation is engaging the attention of the children now, and they have painted pictures of ships on vast blue seas, and automobiles on wide highways. They have ingeniously built miniature oceans, and made ships from paper boxes to sail them.

The classes, taught by teachers especially trained for the work, are carried on under the cooperative system. That is, the children go to the regular classes for their oral work in history, geography and other classes not requiring too much eye strain, then return to the special classes for research work and study. All children in the fifth, sixth and seventh grades are taught the touch system of typewriting so they will not be dependent upon long hand. The typewriters they use are the same as the ordinary ones except that they print very large type.

Each period of work requiring close attention is followed by one when the children work with large objects so they can rest their eyes. The lower grades are taught by Miss Helen Appler and the upper grades are taught by Miss Mary O'Brien.

The newest joy to come into the lives of these handicapped boys and girls is the daily taxi ride to and from school. When it was found it was dangerous for them to wind through Washington's heavy traffic, the Non-Academic Pan-Hellenic Association contracted with a cab company for rides for eight weeks. If the benefit ball the association will hold November 3 is successful, the rides will be continued throughout the year.

New Year's Party Started by Woman

IT WAS a woman who started the American custom of "making "whoopee" on New Year's Eve, according to the Milwaukee Journal. It happened 50 years ago in Milwaukee, so the story goes.

Mrs. Charles F. Kietzsch, then helping her husband manage a hotel, started it because she felt sorry for the guests who were away from home and lonesome as the old year died.

Most of the guests were actors, and all loved Mrs. Kietzsch for her kindness, and were so delighted with her New Year's Eve parties and spread such glowing reports of their success that hotels everywhere gradually adopted the idea.

Dressmaker Found Adept With Shears

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT OFTEN HAPPENS you will see a dress in a picture and you know that dress would suit you, but you hunt high and low and you can't find it. You think to yourself: "If I could only sew how easy it would be to have a copy of any dress I like."

All this is very true, but it's much easier and costs very little more to have a dressmaker make your dress for you. There's a certain very talented woman here who sews beautifully. She never turns out anything, be it a blouse or a made-over dress, that doesn't look just jam-up. She has that peculiar knack of copying clothes, too. One of those devastating gowns one sees so frequently in the movies is no problem to her. The model itself is her pattern. With apparently no effort at all she clips away with shears, pins, bastes, and behold! you have the same million-dollar dress for as little as $8.

She's really a very nice person to know. You'll find her adept with the needle and master of any sewing problem, just as you'll find her rates amazingly low.

Camera kits which include a camera, an album—and a complete coloring arrangement—brushes, six colors, and even the water saucers, have catapulted down from much more to 79 cents in celebration of a store-wide sale.

It's unbelievable that such a set which includes a real camera that takes real pictures could possibly cost so little. Parents are bound to recognize this as a unique opportunity to buy at a real bargain price something Junior and Sissie will both like.

Children should have practice on less expensive cameras before they set out as serious amateur photographers. That possibly is one reason why this set, even at its old price, is such a favorite with family groups.

Garment Bags Reduced.

Garment bags made of art ticking are reduced from $1 to 88 cents. They come in all colors and prints and are guaranteed protectors to dresses and suits. In fact, the best way to insure your wardrobe a long life is by means of such bags.

Many customers are using them for storing away their summer clothes so they'll look like new when they emerge next season.

Bath Crystal Prices Drop.

Imported bath crystals with a spicy fragrance once sold here for $1.25. But along comes a great big sale and knocks the old price for a row and sets up a new one for 49 cents.

The French perfumer who manufactures them has long been a favorite with women who preferred unusual scents. So there must be many who will welcome this reduction with wide-open arms and purses.

Japanese slippers—sturdy straw affairs, which stay on because of two criss-cross velvet straps—are all-time favorites with most people. They're light and comfortable to wear around the house and a boon to aching feet. They look so casual and informal that even when ordinary bedroom slippers offend, the little Japanese slippons don't.

At night they literally fall from your feet when you crawl into bed, and next morning they're the easiest thing in the world to slip on while you're dressing. If there's a sudden telephone call, it's a blessing to have these slippers by the bed to save padding across the cold floor.

The shipment which a downtown store recently received includes two types, those with plain straw soles and those with rubber soles. The latter are intended for the shower.

One of America's leading perfumers has manufactured a complete toilet set which includes sachet, toilet water, dusting powder and soap. He has had such a singular popularity with two of his scents that he put out the set in only these.

One is gardenia. The maker has been able to create a perfume identical to the fragrance of the real flower. The other is a blend of garden scents—roses, lilacs, violets, jasmin and others. It's an extremely light fragrance and one ideally suited to those who prefer light flower scents to anything heavier and more exotic.

With this toilet set, plus a bottle of perfume, it would be a simple matter to have the sweetest kind of scents from the moment you stepped from your bath till night, when you daubed a bit of toilet water on your temples.

Silver grapes make lovely table decorations. A spray or two around the base of the candlesticks or spattered over a mirror center piece, or leaning gracefully from a black bowl provide treats for an artist's eye.

Such grapes may be purchased in a Connecticut avenue store, where they are displayed in several decorative ways.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Uterine Fibroids.

TUMORS in the uterus, or uterine fibroids, are common. They develop during the childbearing period. Although at first the tumors are very tiny, they may attain the size of an average grapefruit or even larger. Fibroids are composed of smooth muscle and fibrous tissue and are, theoretically, supposed to start their growth from cells that find their way into the wall of the uterus toward the end of a menstrual period. In many women fibroids cause little, if any, disturbance or discomfort. After the period of childbearing is past there may be a number of small fibroid growths in the wall of the uterus. These have a tendency to continue their slow growth.

Fibroids are prone to degeneration, the cells dying because of a deficient blood supply. Cysts, or open spaces often filled with fluid, then form within the fibroid itself, but only now and then will fibrous tumors become cancerous or malignant—probably less than 1 per cent.

Usually the first symptom that is occasioned by fibroids is prolonged bleeding at the menstrual period. Again, there may be no bleeding, but only a sense of pressure referred to the bladder or the rectum. Occasionally the menstrual periods become more frequent.

Diagnosis is simple when a competent gynecologist is consulted, and frequently the tumors may be felt because of the nodular character of the normally smooth uterus. Sometimes the tumors are but partially buried in the wall of the uterus, and the organ then has the appearance of a large, irregular potato.

If the patient is in the childbearing period small fibroids in the uterus may be left alone unless there is serious bleeding. Sometimes a fibroid may be removed from the wall of the uterus without removing the uterus itself. For the purpose of controlling bleeding from fibroids radium is used with success. It should be used but rarely in women younger than 45 years; nor should it be used in tumors of large size or in the presence of infection or marked anemia.

Sometimes severe anemia results because women permit themsleves to bleed so profusely that operation, when it becomes necessary, can not be performed until the patient has been restored to a position of reasonable resistance.

If it becomes necessary to remove fibroids, operation in the hands of an expert is reasonably safe. If this procedure involves the removal of the uterus itself it does not bring on an artificial change of life unless the ovaries are removed. The operation is usually performed through an abdominal incision, where the field is throughly exposed and where adhesions, if they have occurred, may be separated and the raw surfaces covered.

Post Cooking School Opens Here Tuesday

How to Carve Meats to Be One Feature of Four-day "Parade of Foods."

ANY HOST who has ever struggled to carve a roast with the eyes of critical guests upon him will view with envy the spectacle of a man in a dress suit cutting up a whole side of beef, and surviving the ordeal with his white vest absolutely spotless.

That feat will be performed at The Post cooking school, opening Tuesday in Washington Auditorium, and any man who does not attend is certain to hear about it from his wife, for it will be a feature of all four sessions. Paul A. Goeser, whose meat-cutting prowess has amazed audiences in every part of the country, will give this unique demonstration.

"The Parade of the Foods," with girls in gay costumes displaying cakes and puddings, beautifully garnished roasts and other appetizing dishes fit for a connoisseur, will be another drawing card.

Merchants to Make Gifts.

Awarding of gifts contributed by cooperating merchants will be an additional highlight. Many valuable articles of kitchen equipment will be distributed among the guests at the school; baskets of food will be awarded and there will be helpful recipe booklets and souvenirs for everyone.

While these events will add interest to the school, the feature that will draw the crowds is the return engagement of Miss Ruth Chambers, of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, who made an indelible impression on the minds of thousands of Washington women at The Post school last year.

Miss Chambers is convinced that women want to know more about meat, how to select and cook it so that it will be delicious and tender, how to utilize inexpensive cuts, ways of using left-overs and unusual methods of using meat in the every-day menu. For this reason she will feature meat throughout her lectures, without neglecting other important phases of culinary art, however.

Graduate of Wisconsin U.

Miss Chambers is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, where she specialized in home economics and had wide experience before entering the school field. She has a ready sense of humor, which, combined with a pleasing personality, endeared her to the hearts of last year's audiences.

Four sessions of the school will be held—Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 2 p. m., and Friday at 8 p. m., the concluding session arranged to accommodate business women and men who can not attend during the day. Doors will open at noon, and a public audition system will enable late arrivals to hear perfectly in the rear.

The complete list of prizes and other details will be announced in The Post within the next few days.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHRISTOPHER SANDFORD'S first sensation, after he had felt a hand clapped over his mouth in the back seat of the police car, was that he was lying on a rose-colored coverlet and that there was a strong scent of pines floating into the room through the opened window. Inside was only the light from a heavily shaded lamp. He even failed to recognize the figure leaning over him. His first question was obvious, but natural.

"Where am I?" he demanded.

"You are at the bungalow," Mme. de Sayal announced. "I should advise you not to try to move."

He was suddenly aware that there was at least one other person in the room—Milhaven! Then he heard Huitt's voice—calm and definite.

"I consider this an absolutely futile waste of time," the latter said. "However, since you have insisted upon it—ask him the questions."

Knew Whole Story.

"You have been down here for some time, Sandford, watching Mr. Huitt and myself?" Milhaven began.

"Chiefly Mr. Huitt," Christopher replied.

"You know Mr. Huitt's antecedents?"

"I do. I know them from the time he was a small accountant in Sydney to the time when he escaped in a fruit boat, after murdering my father and, I believe, with two other murders on his hands."

"How do you know that he was the man who murdered your father?"

"The first thing I did after I came into money," Christopher recounted, "was to employ a very clever detective in Sydney, who found out for me nearly everything I wanted to know. I got the proofs of Huitt's participation in the raid on the Sydney Bank and I got a copy of the deathbed statement of the manager, indicating Huitt as the man who shot the two clerks and my father.

"It was years, after all, that I searched in vain. I kept the papers, though. My detective friend died——"

"Pardon me," Huitt interrupted. "I killed him."

"I suspected it," Christopher went on. "You are rather good at killing, aren't you? Your Australian friends, my father, Jesson, Julian Bott, Roland Martin——"

"Guilty," Huitt interrupted again. "Is it worth while?"

Huitt Spotted.

"At last, when I was giving up hope and making up my mind to resume my own name and go back to Sydney, I spotted Huitt one evening among the crowd at Waterloo station. Since then I may say that I have never lost sight of him. I have collected specimens of his hand writing and I have proof that he is the most expert and ingenious forger the world has ever seen. If you come to think of it, there is nothing easier in the world than to turn a murder into a suicide if one possesses Huitt's amazing gifts.

"I have the proof," Christopher continued, "that Sam Jesson's letter of confession was a forgery and that Huitt, have helped himself to all his assets at the bank, murdered him in cold blood. Julian Bott refused to come into some scheme, the details of which I do not know. I do know this, though, that at the time Julian Bott was shot he was on the point of discovering that £100,000 worth of his securities had been appropriated by James Huit."

Evidence Left.

"There is a very important question still to be asked," Milhaven interrupted. "You have told us of your discoveries. From the point of view of detective work, you have done marvelously. You are to be congratulated. But—here comes the point. Have you left any written record of your discoveries behind likely to fall into anyone's hands?"

"Certain to, you mean," Christopher corrected him. "The manuscript of my so-called novel contains every paper and all the evidence I have spoken about. I left it behind addressed to the Chief Commissioner of Scotland Yard or whoever might take his place. I left it with my landlady, Mrs. Foulds. I suppose it was not wise to tell you but you seem to have made up your mind to kill me, so I don't suppose it makes much difference."

"On the contrary," Mr. Huitt declared, "it makes a great deal of difference. Have you tried to use your limbs?"

"I can't," Christopher replied.

"You never will again," the bank manager assured him. "You are suffering from the effect of a marvelous drug brought from the East by Lord Milhaven here. In 24 hours you will be dead. Do you see that small bottle on the table?"

"I do."

Antidote Handy.

"That," Mr. Huitt confided, "is the antidote. We have gone as far as this with several others at different times. The antidote has invariably brought them back to life—where we have administered it. Where we have failed to do so, death has taken place at about the expiration of the period I have stated. You woud scarcely expect us to spare you, Mr. Sandford, with all this stock of damaging knowledge you possess and have left behind."

"I don't see that it makes any difference," Christopher replied. "You will have one more murder on your hands. That's all. The police will know. What's the time?"

"Four o'clock in the morning," Milhaven told him.

"In that case," Huitt interrupted, impatiently, "it behooves us to hasten our young friend's departure.

A Queer Plan.

"Not quite so fast, my friend," Milhaven begged "I am thinking. I am not sure whether I shall consent to your killing him. I believe you know, Huitt, that among my other claims to be a sportsman, I was once very nearly a first-class golfer. I was scratch at St. Andrews and I still thoroughly appreciate the science of the game. Now, I have never seen a more lightning-like turn of the wrists than that young man possesses at the top of his swing, and I have never seen a player who could make use of that same turn to cut his balls with an iron so that they look almost like dead things on the green."

"I should like to ask you a question, Sandford. You appear to me to be a remarkably truthful young man; a man of character, I should say, as your father was. Now, if you are allowed to live—in which case you would certainly play in the Walker Cup team before long—would you qualify for England?"

"I decided last night," he confided, feebly, "to live in England."

Outwitted!

"There you are, you see, Huitt," Milhaven pointed out. "I am a judge and I know what I am talking about. We have not a man of his age in England at the present day of anything like his class. We should be guilty of more than murder if we sent a young man like this out of the world when it might make all the difference to the next international contest."

There was a soft peal of laughter from madam.

"Hugh," she murmured, "I still say you are the most wonderful person in the world."

School Children's Abilities Differ

Individual Training Need Seen by Official.

New York, Oct. 11 (Spl.).—The discovery and development of individual attitudes in children is the most important problem facing educators in the public school system today, says Jacob Greenberg, newly elected associate superintendent of schools.

"The schools should provide for the free development of the individual according to aptitudes and capacities, and the measure of achievement in those capacities," said Mr. Greenberg. "We put children through a hopper and expect them to come out educated. An educated man is one who has definite cultural interests, and I believe when education is forced on an individual who can't absorb it the objective we are trying to reach is not achieved."

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

THE Rev. Henry Scott Rubel, former assistant rector of St. Paul's Church, Milwaukee, when arrayed for the pulpit, wouldn't be taken for a radio singer, gag artist, painter or lyricist. But he's all of these.

Perhaps some of his congregation do not know him as "Heinz" Rubel, roly-poly, perennial grower of mustaches and fond pipe smoker and piano pounder . . . but we do . . . or rather did some years back when he delighted droves of youngsters with his antics as comedian and grand opera star of the Camp Dudley Opera Co., the same cradle that brought forth Burgess "Bugs" Meredith to radio fame on the "Red" Davis sketches on N. B. C.

Heinz is currently writing jokes for Joe Penner and even went to Hollywood when the duck fancier was in need of more fun fodder. But Heinz has his checks addressed to "Hal Raynor."

As Heinz, however, we shall remember him . . . with particular nostalgia, early in the morning when he needed a shave . . . back stage when he was screwing his face into villainous contortions . . . singing "Cannibal Land." . . . "It's a Terrible Thing to be a King" . . . or smiling sweetly at his charges in tent D before he wandered into the brush for a pull at his pipe. The University of Wisconsin remembers him as chief cook of its Haresfoot shows. Radio has heard him as "King Kill Kare." Heinz, we hear you're soon due back on the air . . . Alexander Woollcott had better look to his gurgling.

* * * *

THE entire staff of WJSV, used to network programs dunning in their ears all day long, yesterday dropped things, left desks and ceased discussion to listen to two 60-year-old women face a microphone for the first time in their lives.

Mrs. Josephine Kline and Mrs. Helen Sherwood, both of Livingston, Mont., were the women and they sat opposite each other while Harold Gray, announcer, drew from them a poignant, wistful story of their 2,140 hitch-hike here to see the President.

Although surprised that they had been heard over Columbia's entire coast-to-coast network, they showed keen disappointment that members of their families hadn't listened to the hushed, low whispers of their journey here for "justice."

THE shot that killed King Alexander of Yugoslavia and French Minister Barthou will echo among the noises produced at 9 o'clock tonight on "The March of Time." Other dramatizations from the news promised as likely entertainment will be flashed from the rebellion in Spain and additional developments in the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

BECAUSE a widely known Italian navigator prevailed over the timorous protests of his crew and finally landed on a strange shore lined with Indians, radio networks today will present a number of intriguing programs celebrating the memory of Cristoforo Columbo, who is also known as an egg entrepreneur.

Languishing in a musty storeroom, a statue of this same navigator, lost for 65 years, has been found, but today after a little polishing it is as good as new and will be dedicated for public admiration over N. B. C.'s networks at 12:30 p. m.

Other Columbus Day broadcasts on N. B. C. include "America's Heritage from Columbus," a talk delivered by Supreme Knight Martin Carmody, of the K. of C., at 10:30 p. m.; the inauguration of Dr. Dixon Ryan Fox as president of Union College, with an address by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler at 10:00 a. m.; a special message by Spanish Ambassador Luis Calderon at 2:30 p. m., and a dramatization of Berton Braley's poem, "Morgan Sails the Caribbean," will be heard in place of Dr. Damrosch's music hour, at 11 a. m. The latter will be given an orchestral background of music.

ROOSTER screeches his lusty voice four times a day into a mike at WRC . . . but the chanteclerian burst isn't of the barnyard. It's the voice of W. B. Scott, colored factotem and general assistant at the station, whose services were summoned after all sound effect records proved unconvincing. Mr. Scott's voice has been recorded on five records and they will be heard daily during spot announcements on that station sponsored by The Washington Post.

FURTHER fun and fantasy in "Hollywood Hotel" at 9:30 o'clock tonight on C. B. S. will bring Ronald Colman and Loretta Young to the mike with a scene from their forthcoming flicker, "Clive of India."

Other bright spots of the second glance into "Hollywood Hotel" will be Dick Powell's singing of "I'll String Along With You," which has been heard in these parts, and Jane Williams' singing of "One Night of Love" and a duet with Mr. Powell, "Pop Goes Your Heart."

SHORT flashes into the life of Jennifer Hale, haunted by the police for a suspected murder, will be told over WJSV at 10:45 a. m. today, of her flight into the night. Tense, dramatic, the story tells where she boards a boat to meet romance with a seafaring man.

Default Judgment Won By Countess Salvoni

A default judgment of $9,150 against Edwin N. Salvoni, 1146 Eighteenth street northwest, was entered in favor of Countess Marjorie Pilson Salvoni, of New York, yesterday in the District Supreme Court.

An award of $75 a month was obtained by the Countess from the Maryland courts some years ago and when her former husband failed to meet the payments she obtained a default judgment against him in Maryland. Chief Justice A. A. Wheat yesterday awarded her a judgment for the entire amount owed her by her one-time husband when the erstwhile spouse failed to make a defense against the claim.

It Might Be Worse

Now that you know what sort of a fireplace Blackie has, what do you suppose he burns in it most of the time? Sawdust. That sawmill man left a pile of sawdust as big as a four-room house, and it was the nicest sort of stuff to burn in that round fireplace. And it never did go out; it burned day and night, and was almost no trouble to keep going. Sometimes, when it got awfully cold, Blackie would put some wood on to top the sawdust, but most of the time he didn't need any wood. And there was enough of that sawdust to last as long as Blackie would live, and so he didn't have to worry about what he would do when his wood was all gone.

So, you see, Blackie and his friends were pretty well fixed for any sort of weather.

Plenty to eat and plenty to burn; what else could they want? Certainly they could take life easy for a while, for they had enough in the smokehouse to last them till after Christmas. So they would let Mr. Man and Uncle Joe rest for a few days, at least.

They would just mix a few rabbits with their pork and turkey and other things, once in a while, and now that it was so cold there was sure to be some wild ducks coming to the creek. It did look to a bird up a tree that the old dead Blackie Bear, that crazy old owl that made such a foolish noise, and that "strange animal" were really on the road to a pleasant winter, and that's what Jay Bird said when he came in from the bamboo vine where he had been eating berries.

"Yes, it might be worse," said Blackie, "it might be worse; but I hardly see how it could be any better. Nothing ever was so bad it couldn't get worse, but some things just couldn't get worse, and some things just couldn't get any better. It could and would have been worse for Mr. Man if he had put all of the pigs he killed into the wagon; but he kept one at home, and so he has plenty of good pork. It could and would have been worse if we hadn't sent Hee-Haw back to him, but it just couldn't have been any better."

And now look who's come! You just couldn't guess. Well, it's Hound Dog. You know he went with Tom down to Cool Spring to help find which way that great big man drove Hee-Haw, and he made a mighty good guess who it was that sat on the driver's seat. He had just been itching to come over and tell Blackie about that trip, but he knew Jay Bird had told him most everything.

Besides, Aunt Lindy had said to Tom that she would rather somebody would steal half the things she had than to let them kill her dog, and so she had kept him shut and locked in his house for several nights. She certainly did think a lot of him, and she was as good to him as she could be, and so he wasn't going to stay long, but would get back to Aunt Lindy's before dark. No, he couldn't stay to supper, but he would take along that fresh ham bone, and he would come over to Sunday dinner, and then they would have time for everybody to tell what they had seen and heard.

"My, my, but it looks cozy in here," said Hound Dog, as he took his bone and started out into the cold. "Yes," said Blackie, "it could be worse; it could be worse."

Culbertson on Bridge

Two Sole Six-Bids.

In my morning mail the other day I received a very intelligent question on the bidding of a Bridge hand. The writer did not mention any cards at all, but merely explained that he and his partner had bid the hand in the following manner:

North	South
1♢	1♢
3♠	3NT
6♢	Pass

The letter closed with the query "Is such bidding possible?"

My automatic first response was "no." It seemed a little remote that the North player could have a hand which would justify bidding six single-handed after having received only a simple raise and then a minimum response to a force from his partner, without having had a two-bid in the first place. In other words, a superficial analysis would seem to indicate that if one's hand is strong enough to go to a Slam with only one raise, it surely must be strong enough to try for game, even if partner has a blank, and accordingly the bidding should have been opened with two instead of one.

A little further thought, however, convinced me that such hands are definitely possible. I started off on the premise that North's diamond holding was something like six to the Ace-Ten or the Ace-nothing. With this as a start, the rest was easy. I wrote out innumeroble hands which the South player might have held which would make the above bidding most sound. A typical holding is the following:

♠ A K x x
♡ A Q 10
♢ A 10 x x x x

This hand is a questionable two-bid without any knowledge of a diamond fit. However, when partner raises to two diamonds, showing either four cards in the diamond suit or three to the King or Queen, a Slam now seems to be a definite possibility. The heart Jack or any heart holding in Dummy which will make it possible to lead up to Declarer's combination twice, must offer some sort of play for the Slam. Of course, it is barely possible that partner might have a sound raise to two diamonds, including side strength in the club suit, without the cards necessary to give a play for the Slam, but opposite the opening hand I have shown, about nine out of every ten hands that South might hold would make the Slam, if not a laydown, at least a fifty-fifty chance.

One possible South hand comes to my mind which contains duplication in the possession of the club King, and yet makes the Slam a laydown unless all three trumps are in one hand. The holding is:

♡ x x x x
♢ K x x x
♣ K x x

* * *

Strangely enough, in the same mail I received another letter which asked a very similar question. The writer wanted to know if the following bidding could occur:

North	South
3♡	3NT
6♠	Pass

Having already given a similar subject some thought due to the previous letter, I was able immediately to answer "yes." All I need to do is show the following North-South hands:

North	South
♠ A K Q J 10 x	♠ x x
♡ A x x	♡ J x x
♢ 9	♢ Q x x
♣ K 3 2	♣ A J 9 x x

The minute South responds with two clubs North knows there must be some play for a spade Slam. If hearts are not opened (and there is certainly no better than an even chance that they will be), the Slam can be made even if one club trick has to be lost either to the Ace or to the Queen. And even if hearts are opened, and South has a club holding exactly as depicted above (the South hand is certainly not a strong one), the Slam may still be makable through a club finesse and either a 3-2 club break or the drop of the Ten on the first round. As a matter of fact, the North player's bidding on this hand is most praiseworthy. North quite properly did not try for a Grand Slam by bidding four notrump as he knew his partner, with both Aces and some solidity in the club suit, would have made a different response than three notrump on the second round.

The Federal Diary

ALL employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing should be placed on a 40-hour-week category, thus eliminating one of the most confusing and discriminatory administrative problems in Government service, Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, declared last night.

BAKER

The so-called Thomas amendment to the Independent Offices Appropriation act, setting up a 40-hour week for certain categories of Federal employes in the mechanical groups, Mr. Steward pointed out, has resulted in a peculiar discrimination involving more than 3,000 employes at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

The Comptroller General has ruled that only 700 of the 3,000 employes at the bureau, whose pay is adjusted by the Treasury Department, are within the purview of the 40-hour amendment. The remainder of the employes, of whom the vast majority are women, have their pay fixed by Congress and are required to work 44 hours a week, nothwithstanding the fact that other employes doing the same type of work are covered by the 40-hour provision.

"Having two sets of employes engaged in the same operation," the employe leader said, "and having different working hours, presents an embarrassing administrative problem. The NFFE expects to convince Congress of the necessity of remedying the inadequacy in the existing legislation and placing all of the employes of the bureau in the 40-hour category."

Miss Belle A. Trouland, president of the 25-year-old local union, No. 105, NFFE, declares that "we are not to suppose that Congress intentionally discriminated against women. Nevertheless, the principal discrimination contained in the Thomas amendment is leveled at women employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing who, although working in the same units production as the men employes who benefit from the 40-hour provision, nevertheless are required to work an additional four hours each week."

Babcock Is Honored.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, will leave San Francisco Saturday for Washington, pausing en route to speak at Yosemite National Park and before employes on the TVA project at Knoxville.

Tonight he will be guest of honor at a banquet given by AFGE Lodge, No. 51, in San Francisco. The labor leader is expected back in the Capital October 24 or 25.

"MY THIRTEENTH CHILD and SEVENTH SON"—
Says Mrs. Conway of 20 N. Federal Street, Lynn, Mass.

"I am the mother of thirteen children, eleven of whom are living. The youngster in the picture is my seventh son. I was weak and tired and suffered from nervous headaches. My sister recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me a lot."—Mrs. C. Conway.

"When we were married I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven months later we were blessed with a darling boy who weighed 8 pounds. Last June another little son was born who weighed 9 pounds, 10 ounces. I am feeling fine and doing all my work. The children are strong and healthy, thanks to your medicine."—Mrs. Joseph Montigny.

"I didn't believe what other women told me about your medicine until I tried it myself. I took six bottles before Vincent was born. He was eighteen months old when this picture was taken and he is strong and well."—Mrs. Josephine Scagliona.

'Big Fair Day' Lures 15,000 To Frederick

10,000 Witness Races; Record Is Broken by Lawful Tip.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—Nearly 15,000 persons, it was estimated, attended the Frederick Fair today. It was the third and "big fair day" and the weather was ideal. With favorbale weather conditions tomorrow the receipts for the week will be the largest for five years.

Today was politicians' day and Harry W. Nice, candidate for Governor, and Fred N. Zihlman, candidate for Congress from the Sixth District, mingled with the crowd in the grand stand.

About 10,000 witnessed the races, three harness and two running events. Both grand stands were filled and several thousand persons followed the events from other points of vantage.

A new track record was established when Lawful Tip, a brown mare owned and driven by Ed Myers, jr., Harrington, Del., went the last heat in the 2:15 trot in the third race in 2:06¼. The mare made a beautiful finish down the stretch and clipped one second from the record of 2:07¼ established some years ago by Zombro Dillon, owned by Havenshoe Farm.

Hattie Axe Wins.

The first race, a 2:08 pace, purse $300, was won by Hattie Axe, a brown mare, entered by the Caton Stables, Wilmington, Del., who took the first and third heats. Gladys Potempkin, a brown mare owned by J. Rodman, Kewanee, Ill., was second, and Calumet Alone, a chestnut gelding, owned by Ed Myers, Harrington, Del. was third. Calumet Alone led almost to the finish but Hattie Axe stepped in front just under the wire.

The second race, 2:18 pace, was won by Cockey Hamlin, a chestnut gelding, entered by E. H. Casper, Bridgeton, N. J., in straight heats. The gelding took the lead at the start in the third heat and passed under the wire with time to spare well ahead of the field. Max Stout, a brown gelding, owned by John Hackson, Quarryville, Pa., was second in straight heats, and Eddie Direct, a brown gelding, owned by the Eyler Stables, Thurmont, was third.

The third race, a 2:15 trot, was won in straight heats in easy fashion by Lawful Tip, a brown mare owned and driven by Ed Myers, Harrington, Del. Anna Worth, a sorrel mare owned by Ed Crawford, Taneytown, Md., was second, and Peter Glenn, a brown gelding, third. In the last heat Lawful Tip broke the local track record in 2:06¼, heretofore 2:07¼, and was given a "hand" by the crowd in the grandstand.

The fourth race, 1 1-16-mile dash, went to Justa Flapper, entered by R. Crawford, Leesburg, Va. Unton, a chestnut gelding, enetred by C. Taylor, was second, and Oella, a chestnut filly owned by J. D. Baker, Hagerstown, was third.

W.C.T.U. Delegates Shun Beer-Selling Hotels in Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Delegates to the State convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union gathering here tonight for the convention opening tomorrow are not using Roanoke hotels because beer is available in them, and consequently, they are on the Virginia "white list," which has been out of existence in the State since it went dry in 1916.

This announcement was made today by Mrs. H. W. Sanders, president of the Roanoke-Botetourt County Hostess Union.

She said one hotel had no license to sell beer, but the W. C. T. U. committee was informed that beer could be procured for guests if they desired it.

A restaurant operator said he had been approached by canvassers and they agreed to patronize him because he does not sell beer.

Vote in Bristol Against Liquor Hailed by Dry

Anti-Salon League Heads See Ban as Example of Aroused Church.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—The Rev. Edward J. Richardson, superintendent of the Antisaloon League of Virginia, today hailed the referendum in Bristol, Va., abolishing the Virginia alcoholic beverage control board liquor store there as an "example of what can be done when the church is thoroughly aroused."

Voting negatively by 707 to 32 on the question of "Shall the sale of alcoholic beverages, other than wine and beer, be permitted in the City of Bristol, Va.," that city voted to abolish the A. B. C. store, which in the twelve weeks of its existence did a business of $132,000.

Mr. Richardson said:

"We believe when this liquor question comes up on its merits separated from politics the drys can almost invariably win."

He said his office did not participate in the campaign in Bristol, but that it is now devoting much time and effort to an educational campaign.

Norfolk Grills Policeman in Death of Girl

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Letters saying she was unable to stay away from the man she loved better than life, and that she had been warned to stay out of the apartment under threats of being shot, were pieced in with other evidence tonight by investigators in the case of Virginia Cuthrell Lennox, 20-year-old divorcee and mother, found dead in a gas-filled apartment.

Other letters addressed to Policeman Kenneth L. Jackson of the Norfolk force, led to a rigid questioning of him, and he admitted he had been keeping company with the girl for some time. The investigators, unwilling to accept the apparent cause of death, left no evidence unscrutinized. They later questioned Mrs. Jackson.

The letters to the policeman were labeled for delivery only in the event of death. In one of them reference to a gun was made. The girl said it was given to her by the policeman.

"I tried to finish it with the gun last night," the letter said. "Don't know whether it was because you gave it to me that just couldn't let it happen, or if * * * Anyway, I decided to stay and stick it out and not give up too easily, but gosh, it's hard."

Still another letter was addressed to Mrs. M. S. Mann, of Washington, N. C., which said, among other things: "After everything is settled take half of what is left and save it up for Raymond (her 3-year-old son), until he is 21 years old. You'll find Paul (believed to be Paul Lennox, her second husband), in Pottsdam, N. Y."

The investigators were giving no little attention to candy and whisky found in the apartment. A chemist is expected to report on an analysis tomorrow.

Along the Tri-State Trail

with

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor

There is a real mystery down at Leonardtown, Md., and so far as one can learn it doesn't center around the theft of jewels or the matter of murder. The mystery hinges solely around what is happening to about 72,000 gallons of water, part of the municipal supply, each day. The mystery has been going on for two weeks and the best of Sherlock Holmeses of the town's water department have been unable to find the cause of the leakage.

Here's real news for John Public. According to the Associated Press, retail food prices in Richmond and Norfolk, Va., were lower the week ended September 25 than the week before.

The frost is one the pumpkin in many sections of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania and it won't be long before the sound of the axe will be heard by the turkey. In fact, the writer of this column understands that in the vicinity of Inwood, W. Va., there are about 5,000 choice, young turkeys that before many weeks will find their way to metropolitan markets as the first step toward the Thanksgiving Day dinner.

Berryville, Va., reports no depression—at least for the time being. Every industry in that little town of 1,100 people is reported humming, and the unemployed of a few months ago are receiving their pay checks again. Basket factories, apple by-product plants and apple-checking plants are among the leading industries running on full schedule.

The old-time fair is still popular, at least that is the opinion one gains from reading press dispatches from Frederick, Md., where the annual fair is drawing crowds of from 5,000 to 10,000 daily. The fair—like all things—must have an ending and the concluding events are scheduled for tonight.

The populace of St. Mary's County, Md., no doubt is interested at the moment in finding some suitable substitute for that delicacy known as green tomato pickle. It seems that too much rain has proven as bad as too little rain for the people of that section, and this year, unlike previous seasons, the abundance of rainfall has resulted in few green tomatoes for pickles.

There is a question in the minds of many people right now—In how many places can a man be at the same time? This question appears to have arisen following the escape of Robert Mais and Walter Lagenza, gangster-murderers, from the Richmond (Va.) Jail September 29. Since their unexcused exit from jail there, the hunted pair have been reported seen, at the same time, in a half-dozen towns and cities of three States. The real question appears, in the minds of police officers, not to be in how many places can they be, but where they are.

William H. Rice Named Virginia Station Agent

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—William H. Rice, former chief freight clerk of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, has become station agent, succeeding C. C. Cox, who retired after 54 years' service.

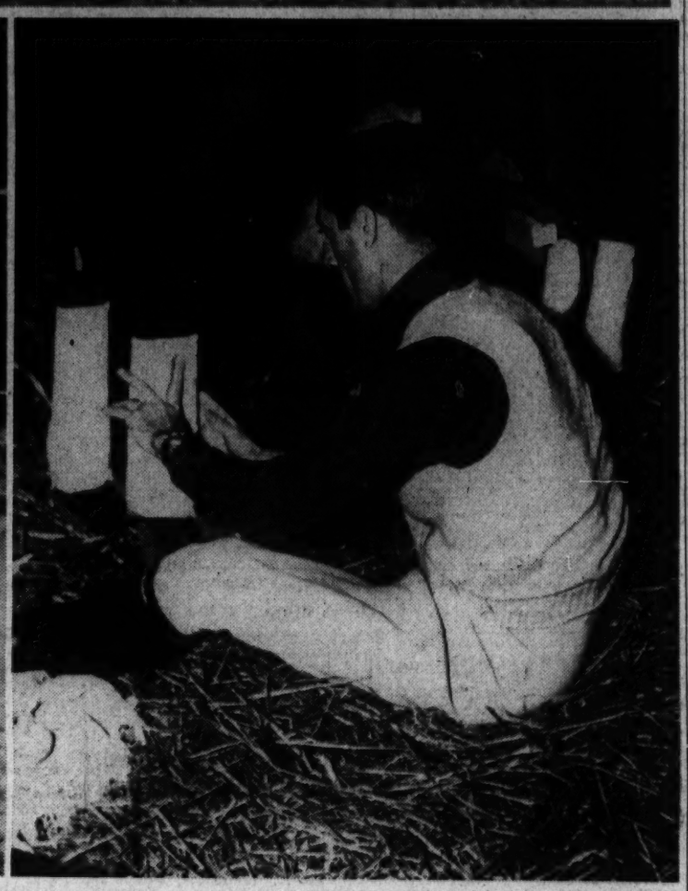
Rice formerly held the position of assistant station agent, but was made chief clerk two years ago when the assistant's position was abolished. Cox took first service with the company in Ashland, Va., as a telegraph operator in 1880. After subsequent service at Richmond, he was named Fredericksburg station agent to succeed the late William D. Scott.

Shortage of Pupils Closes Little School

Westminster, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.). Refusal of parents of fourth-grade pupils, living near Mechanicsville, Carroll County, to permit transfer of the grade to a one-room school at Pleasant Gap, necessitated the closing of the latter school this week.

M. S. H. Unger, superintendent of schools, pointed out that refusal of parents to allow the transfer had reacted favorably to the school board's consolidation program, and was not comparable to the recent situation arising in Garrett County, where a building program has been necessitated through the refusal of parents in several communities to sanction abandonment of small schools.

Society Folk and Horse Lovers Turn Eyes Toward Llangollen



Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

Prominent society folk of the East and members of the equine world from a dozen States of the Atlantic seaboard will journey to Llangollen, estate of Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney, at Upperville, Va., where the annual Llangollen race meet will be held this afternoon. Extensive preparations have been made by Mr. and Mrs. Whitney to accommodate the large gallery and retinue of horses expected. Irish-type stables (above photo) are among the quarters provided for the stabling of horses to compete in the events.

Corn-Hog Program Tested in Ballot

Adjustment Plan Favored in Fauquier County.

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—In the election held throughout Fauquier County, on the corn-hog adjustment program, only about one-fourth of the contract signers voted. Two questions were voted on: Do you favor an adjustment program dealing with corn and hogs in 1935? and, Do you favor a one-contract per farm adjustment program dealing with grains and live stock to become effective in 1936? The vote on the first question was, 68 yes and 4 no; in the second, 61 yes and 11 no.

County Agent Walter B. Nourse stated already $45,975.23 has been paid to date on the contracts with two more payments due on hogs, one on wheat between now and the last of January. Mr. Nourse it of the opinion the figures will reach around $70,000 when all payments have been made.

Clergyman Leads Raid on Farm Still; Marylander Held

Myersville, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—The Rev. Robert J. Ridgley, minister of the Church of the Brethren, recently decided to take up law enforcement as a side line. As a result, Wilbur Horine, well-known farmer, residing 2½ miles west of here, will face United States Commissioner B. Angle Wolfinger, of Hagerstown, tomorrow on charges of allowing an illicit liquor still to be operated upon his premises.

Horine was cited to appear before the commissioner following a raid late last night by Federal Agent Ralph S. Tagg, of Hagerstown, who was accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Ridgley. The latter, it is said, was given information yesterday concerning the operation of the still on the Horine place and after a secret visit to the scene notified Tagg.

Unity Pledge Wins Cheers Of Methodists

Bishop McDowell Sees Healing of Breach Vital in Future.

2,000 Delegates Acclaim Decision to Weld 3 Groups of Faith.

Baltimore, Oct. 11 (AP).—Leaders of American Methodism, counseled to forget dead issues and past bitterness, today pledged their "prayer and pleading" for the movement for unity of the three major branches of their church.

The action came during the second day of the Methodism sesquicentennial celebration. Bishops of the north and south branches of the church and members of the governing board of the Protestant Methodist branch, came to the stage following several addresses and, amid prolonged applause from some 2,000 delegates and visitors, pledged themselves to work for unity.

Bishop William F. McDowell, Washington, was the first speaker on the "Unification Day" program. He was followed by Bishop John Moore, Dallas, Tex., and Bishop Frederick Leete, Indianapolis. Each of the church leaders pleaded for unity.

"Separations of the past have had their day," Bishop McDowell said. "We aren't living in 1828 or 1845. Reasons for union are not in the past or the present, but in the future."

Bishop Moore warned that the unity "must not be a mere aggregation," but rather a "body capable of carrying its real burden." This is a late day for denominational quibbling, sectarian troubles and sectional sufficiency," he warned.

"Well, I thought somebody would faint when I mentioned sectional sufficiency," the bishop remarked. It was over the issue of slavery that the split came between the Northern and Southern branches of the church.

Greetings to the delegates were brought by Dr. T. Albert Moore, from the United Church of Canada; Dr. T. Ferrier Hulme, delegate from England, and Dr. H. T. Medford, Washington, D. C., Negro minister of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

Tomorrow night, a pageant, "The Spreading Flame," depicting the rise of Methodism, will be presented. The morning and afternoon sessions will have to do with Methodism's contributions to American civilization. Secretary of Commerce Roper will preside over Friday's session.

The student dance committee has announced that Isham Jones' Orchestra will furnish the music.

Pitt-Trojan Clash Headlines Nation's Grid Program Tomorrow

Yale Renews Old Rivalry With Penn

Columbia Lions Tackle V. M. I., Rice Meets S. Methodists.

FROM the fun-kissed shores of California to the bock-bound coast of Maine, the gridiron world tomorrow will plunge into serious business of the feverishly hectic period to be known as the 1934 football season.

The University of Southern California will make its farthest invasion into the East against the University of Pittsburgh on the Golden Panthers' home scuffing grounds.

Howard Jones is not bringing with him the team he hoped would be available to beard the Panthers in their hilltop lair. The Trojans' 1934 troupe played feebly against the small college of the Pacific, then folded under the smashing attack of Washington State.

The graduation of Tay Brown and Ernie Smith, terrifying tackles, commenced the disintegration of the Trojans. When Aaron Rosenberg and Larry Stevens, a duo of Gargantuan guards, received their diplomas, the breakdown was complete. Jones has been unable to fill the gaps.

A verdure-tinted Pennsylvania eleven, which bowed to Ursinus last week will tackle the Yale Bulldog at Old Eli. Eight sophomores are in the Red and Blue line-up. These sophs formed the nucleus of the best frosh team assembed at Penn for years. They may develop into the best varsity Old Penn has assembled in many years.

Renewal of Series.

With the exception of a 1925 encounter, which was won by Penn, the Elis and Quakers have not met since the mauve decade, when Yale always won. The game generally is expected to give a definite clew as to Yale's 1934 prospects. Experience will ride on its side.

Lou Little's Columbia Lions, who chewed up the Yale Bulldog last week, will take a breather against doughty little V. M. I., in a Manhattan engagement.

Pointing for the Harvard, Yale and Illinois battles, which loom ominously in the offing, the Army will go to the mat with Drake at West Point. Special preparation for both the Drake encounter and University of the South engagement, which comes a week later, is being confined almost exclusively to defense, particularly to those two teams.

Well-rounded Squad.

Army's entire plan of action is centered around the project of developing a well-drilled, well-rounded squad, rather than concentration on a dozen or so regulars. Failure to develop a large squad a year ago is the explanation for Army's green and inexperienced team for this campaign.

Murdock May Play.

With Frank Murdock, 1932 right tackle and captain-elect in 1933, again eligible by faculty decree, Cornell hopes for better line play against Syracuse. Murdock may not be in condition to play, as he did not report for practice until Monday.

The return of Hal Nunn and Frank Irving, regular ends, is further expected to strengthen the line play of Cornell against its first major foe.

In the Southland, the Duke-Georgia Tech game will hold the spotlight. The Blue Devils are primed for their quest of vengeance against the Georgians, who handed them their only setback last season. The Golden Tornado's 6-to-0 victory probably prevented Duke from receiving a Rose Bowl bid.

Purdue-Notre Dame.

Purdue meets Notre Dame at South Bend in a Midwest classic and the Rice-Southern Methodist, encounter at Houston will be the focal point of attention in the Southwest.

Around the Capital, great interest attaches to the Navy-Maryland battle scheduled for Annapolis. An up-and-coming collection of sturdy youngsters, the Terps are being conceded a chance of upsetting their more highly rated opponents.

13 Backfield Players With Ohio State Squad

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 11 (AP).—Coach Francis A. Schmidt and his Ohio State football team started on their Illinois invasion at 8:30 tonight, and the mentor must be planning on his ball carriers doing plenty of work in the game with Zuppke's warriors Saturday, for he took 13 blackfield men on the trip.

The team will arrive in Danville, Ill., tomorrow morning, and avoiding the custom of former years, will not go into campaign for a workout on the Illinois field, but will stage a light practice on the Danville High School gridiron Friday afternoon.

George Washington, With Its Finest Line In History, Favored Over Citadel Tonight

Colonials Threw Denver for Total 1-Yard Loss Last Week.

SMARTING under the sting of its scoreless tie with Denver last week, George Washington goes back into action tonight at Griffith Stadium, where it meets The Citadel. The kick-off will be at 8:15 o'clock.

On paper the Colonials figure to beat the Cadets by several city blocks, but after last week's landslide brought an avalanche of upsets, G. W. coaches have taken the necessary precautions to prevent an addition to the list. The same team that started against Denver will trot out for the opening kick-off tonight.

Dale Alexander, full back, and Ben Plotnicki, quarter back, were given trials during the week, threatening to replace Prather and Kavalier, respectively. Last night, however, the board of strategy decided on the latter pair for starting roles.

Fine Forward Wall.

The line will have Parrish and Benefield, ends; Deming and Clark, tackles; Strayer and Kolker, guards; Rathjen, center. This combination represents the finest forward wall ever developed at the downtown school. Denver's attack netted a 1-yard loss last week, and the Westerners naturally failed to make a first down through the line.

A tall, rangy center, 6 feet 6 inches tall, who does the kicking and various other things for The Citadel, is his team's outstanding player. Levi tips the scales at 175 pounds, a weight—or lack of it—that emphasizes his great height. He also is quite a hand at snagging passes.

Lost Last Week.

The Citadel dropped a 12-6 decision to Oglethorpe last week in the curtain-raiser and there is little hope that it will break into the win column at George Washington's expense.

Tigers to Play King College.

Bristol, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—"Hold that Tiger!" will be the King College battlecry when the powerful Hampden-Sydney Football Team invades Bristol Saturday night.

Changes Plan In Cavalier Line

Tebell Indicates Shakeup for St. John's Contest.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Virginia's workout today gave indication that Coach Gubs Tebell may make several important changes in the Cavalier line-up when the team goes into action against St. John's College in Scott Stadium at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Billy Zimmer is likely to be playing right guard at the kickoff and Colin Montgomery may be next to him in the center position over the ball. In the back field Griff Dodson has been making a strong bid for the full back post, but he'll hardly be able to displace the veteran Spencer Berger.

Coach Tebell kept four teams in dummy scrimmage a good part of the afternoon. While one eleven was on defense against a reserve team drilled in St. John's plays, two others took turns going through the attacking routine against each other.

Heavy Shuffle Now Facing Cards

Breadon Must Choose to Trade Players or Face Financial Loss in '35.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—The world at large is by now pretty well aware of the fact that Sam Breadon's St. Louis Cardinals won for him the baseball championship this year, but only today did close followers of the game come to the realization that the title brought with it a world-rounded headache.

The problem which was the direct cause of the headache has as many angles as a Chinese pagoda. Breadon can hold on to what he has and win another National League pennant and, probably, another world championship. Or he can break up the combination that brought him, albeit belatedly, these two bits of glory this year.

Fear a Runaway Race.

A baseball team, as a rule, is a losing proposition if the race is not a close one. It won't be close in the National next year if the Cards are kept intact. In such a case Breadon would have a team which is certain to be an expensive one, and diminishing gate receipts with which to pay salaries.

It's no secret that the half dozen Cards who were mainly responsible for the St. Louis success are going to put the bee on Breadon for lots more money than they got this year. Nobody is even trying to guess how loudly the Deans, Dizzy and Daffy, are going to yell. Their yells aren't likely to be in vain, either, for they have two things they need to get wage boosts—brilliant records and the wholehearted support of every baseball fan in the country, and St. Louis, in particular.

Fans Demand Deans.

The Deans, in fact, constitute most of Breadon's trouble. He simply can't sell them. The Cards fans have made these two Oklahoma hurlers their idols. And if he should let them go after a publicly aired salary squabble, the St. Louis fans, who this year were scarcely generous in their patronage, would shun Sportsman's Park as they would an isolation ward.

When and if Mr. Breadon decides to dispose of his ivory, or any part of it, he won't have much trouble. New York and Chicago, the two richest clubs in the circuit, would stay up all night trying to outbid one another for the Deans. And there is no club which would not be interested in such talent as that of Pepper Martin, Jack Rothrock, "Ducky-Wucky" Medwick and Bill Hallahan.

Purdue Backs Groomed For Notre Dame Battle

La Fayette, Ind., Oct. 11 (AP).—Duane Purvis and Jim Carter, star Purdue backs, worked with the varsity today in its last hard drill before Saturday's game with Notre Dame, and both are expected to see some service in the contest. Purvis probably will not start and may be used only for forward passing. "Butch" Loebs, regular right end, was knocked unconscious in a head-on collision with a freshman back, but returned to his position later.

Smart Hoss

'Tells' Judges He'll Win —Then Does It.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11 (AP).—A right smart hoss is Funderburg, a 2-year-old owned by E. L. Vaughan. Before running in the third race at Sportsman's Park today, he "talked it over" with the placing judges and then went out to win his first victory.

Funderburg was parading to the post with the other horses when he suddenly threw Jockey Paul Keester and pranced up to the placing judges' stand, poking his nose at the officials as if to say, "I'm going to win today, so give me a break."

At the finish of the race, Funderburg was in front three lengths. He paid $8.86 to win.

Hoyas Are Off For N. Y. Today

Squad of 33 to Seek Its Second Victory.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

FACING its major test of the season in an aggressive, powerful Manhattan eleven, Georgetown's squad—33 strong—is off for New York at 4 o'clock this afternoon, overflowing with confidence and a hard-bitten determination to bring home its second straight victory.

Coach Jack Hagerty yesterday named a tentative starting line-up that had Chappa and Del Vecchio, ends; Downer and Cummings or Voight, tackles; Cohen and Kelliher, guards; Parcells, quarter back; Herron and Saverine, half backs; Meglin, full back.

The back field is one of the fastest any Georgetown team has boasted. Parcells, Herron and Saverine are 10-second men, and not much slower in full football regalia. Meglin is more of a plodding, line-smashing type, and a dangerous man in the pinches.

Greatly Improved.

Manhattan will see a team greatly improved over the one that it fought to a 20-to-20 stalemate last season. The Hoyas are bigger, averaging 190 pounds in the line and 175 in the back field, and more in tune with the Hagerty strategy and methods.

In winning from St. Mary's in its opening game, Georgetown uncorked a smooth-running attack that rocked the visitors back on their haunches and kept them there all evening. Smooth, vicious charging and an improved brand of blocking—more improved by a week of practice—also was noticeable. A potent aerial attack, the bludgeon that knocked St. Mary's into defeat, will be much in evidence tomorrow. The passing offense is the best a Georgetown team has carried into battle in many years, not excluding the golden era of Lou Little's regime.

Ready for Battle.

Manhattan served notice that it is ready for a fight to the finish last week when it held Kansas State to a 13-13 draw. The Meehan machine, always versatile, well drilled and confident, is in good physical condition and ready to resume its winning ways.

Farrell Only Terp Out of Contest

Maryland, in Practice, Stresses Passing, Foe Builds Defense.

NAVY'S budding Admirals and Maryland's not-so-slow Terrapins taper off this afternoon after a week of strenuous drilling for their big game tomorrow in Annapolis.

From Crabtown is reflected a quiet confidence that foretold victory for Lieut. Tom Hamilton's men. At Maryland an air of tenseness, ripe with expectancy, prevailed. The coaches, students and players sense the imminence of another Terp triumph.

Maryland will respond to the opening whistle minus the services of Al Farrell, guard, whose nose was broken in the Washington and Lee game last week. The big fellow underwent an operation at the university hospital in Baltimore two days ago and probably will be out for at least a month.

McCaw or Bradley.

With this exception the starting team will be the same that lost by one touchdown to W. and L. Either Stewart McCaw or Brooks Bradley will be assigned to Farrell's position. The backfield will include Cothoron, quarter; Guckeyson and Sachs, halves, and Gormley, full back. Dick Nelson, Earl Widmyer, Joe Crecca and Ed Daly will be held in reserve for situations where speed is imperative.

Maryland stressed passing and wide-open football during practice, while Navy spent a goodly portion of its practice time welding a defense for such an attack. Middy scouts first became aware of the Terps' potent aerial attack in the St. John's game and later against the Generals. Nelson, Gormely and Sachs do most of the passing, with Ennis, Willis, Buscher and Guckeyson on the receiving end.

Navy No Slouch.

Navy is no slouch at heaving the ball, though Buz Borries proved conclusively against Virginia that giving the ball to him on an end run or off-tackle thrust is a safer way of advancing. Borries, ace of the Middy backfield, is headed for an All-American berth and his path has been charted directly through the Maryland breastworks.

Dick Bull, regular end, has been supplanted by "Moocher" Mini, a hard-running, vicious-tackling youngster, who proved his mettle in the Virginia game. Mini's presence in the line-up means a two-fold help to his team's cause. He can go get runners and loose balls.

Punting About Even.

In punting, the path Navy used in treading to victory over the Cavaliers, the honors will be about even. Bill Clark, Navy kicker, averaged 41 yards on a soggy field with a wet ball, and this was matched by Bill Guckeyson against W. and L. Clark is Navy's only consistent booter, but Maryland can call on Nelson or Widmyer in addition to its sophomore full back.

Tomorrow's game is Navy's first against a team of major importance. Maryland has more man-power than either William and Mary or Virginia, whom Navy defeated. It must beremembered, too, that Maryland's 1933 team is virtually intact, while Clark is the only middy who participated in every game last autumn.

George Beats Szabo In 37-Minute Bout

Henry Garber required only 19 minutes to defeat Harry Fields in a bloody semi-final match. Scotty McDougal and Frank Brunowicz wrestled to a 30-minute draw in a preliminary.

Foxx Wires to Mack, 'O.K. to Rejoin Team'

Philadelphia, Oct. 11 (AP).—Jimmy Foxx, hefty batsman of the Philadelphia Athletics, who was struck by a pitched ball in a barnstorm game at Winnipeg a few days ago, sent a telegram to Connie Mack today saying he was "O. K."

Foxx said he was leaving tomorrow to join the barnstorming party at Calgary.

Michigan's Grid Team Off to Chicago Game

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 11 (AP).—Michigan's football team took a last look at the University of Chicago offensive formations this afternoon and then packed up its equipment preparatory for the trip to Chicago Friday for the first conference game for the Maize and Blue.

As if he did not have his fill of mishaps and misfortunes, Coach Harry Kipke discovered Thursday afternoon that Ferris Jennings, the sophomore flash who was to start at quarter back Saturday, was limping on an injured leg. The injury was such that his place in the starting back field was doubtful.

Attendance Doubled At Belmont Track

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Attendance at Belmont Park during its autumn race meeting was more than double that of the fall of 1933, the report of the Westchester Racing Association reveals. A total of 70,032 paid admissions were recorded during the 12 days, as compared to 34,797 in 1933. Gross receipts this year were $200,754.32 and the State of New York was paid $19,880.38. A year ago the receipts were $106,630.28 and the State did not share in them.

Rowe and Edna Escape Fans And Are Wed in Detroit Hotel

DETROIT, Oct. 11 (AP).—Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, the 22-year-old pitching star of the Detroit Tigers, and his childhood sweetheart, Miss Edna Mary Skinner, of El Dorado, Ark., were married in the Detroit-Leland Hotel here tonight.

Only a few personal friends of the couple attended the ceremony, the schoolboy and his sweetheart having finally escaped the fans who promised to follow them all the way to the altar.

Ervin "Pete" Fox, the Tiger right fielder, who was Rowe's roommate during the baseball season, and Mrs. Fox, were the attendants. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. L. Calkins, of the Preston Methodist Church.

Earlier in the day when Rowe dodged through crowds of admirers at the county building to get his marriage license, the ace pitcher refused to say when he would be married.

The Rowes will start South soon to make their home in El Dorado where the schoolboy won his early fame as an all-around athlete. The State of Arkansas is prepared to give him a welcome as soon as he gets there, and Rowe may do some pitching in exhibition games.

Ky Laffoon, Denver Golfer, Slated to Win $5,000 Open

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 11 (AP).—Headed by the U. S. P. G. A. team of six selected to invade Australia this fall and winter, several hundred great and near-great golfers, with a liberal sprinkling of so-called dubs, were here tonight ready to tee off tomorrow morning in the $5,000 Open Golf Tournament at the Louisville Country Club.

The P. G. A. team—composed of Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y.; Ky Laffoon, of Denver; Leo Diegel, of Agua Caliente; "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, of Chicago; Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., and Denny Shute, of Philadelphia—was the pretournament favorite to take away at least half the purse.

Principal interest was centered on Laffoon, Western ace who has won approximately $8,500 in tournament play this year.

Others whose brilliant practice rounds drew the attention of spectators included Clarence Yockey, of Kansas City; Walter Kozak, of Cleveland; Ben Loving, of Petersburg, Va.; Bill Mehlhorn, and Sam Park, jr., of Pittsburgh.

Eighteen holes will be played tomorrow, 18 Saturday and 36 Sunday. The eight amateurs will fight it out over the full route Sunday for the amateur awards.

Mrs. Clark Meets Miss Harper in Mid-Atlantic Golf Finals Today at Army-Navy Club

Young State Champion Wins, 6-4

Army-Navy Player Has Battle in Eliminating Mrs. Mackenzie.

By Dave Herman.

LILY HARPER, 18-year-old Portsmouth, Va., sensation, who has the unruffled calm of a Virginia Van Wie in her championship moments, and Mrs. David Clark, of Army and Navy Country Club, a seasoned campaigner, will meet today to decide who will wear the 1934 Middle Atlantic golf crown.

They won their semifinals yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, slim, petite Miss Harper defeating Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, 6 and 4, Mrs. Clark eliminating Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, 2 and 1.

The two finalists will clash at 10 a. m., and there will be more than passing interest in their 18-hole match.

Wins Virginia Championship.

Miss Harper, who has stepped along at a comet pace of late, captured the Virginia championship this season. Two years ago Mrs. Clark, a former Philadelphia golfer, won the same title.

It isn't often that a medalist wins a tournament, and Mrs. Clark, whose record-breaking 83 gave her the prize Monday, will be out to smash the jinx that trails so many qualifying winners who later become finalists.

Miss Harper's playing yesterday was far more impressive than that of Mrs. Clark's, but their shooting in the semifinals is no gauge of what they might do in today's match.

The 104-pound Virginian outmaneuvered and outscored Mrs. Meckley from the start. True, however, is the fact that Mrs. Meckley was decidedly off form, particularly with her approaches and putting. Miss Harper capitalized on every erratic, wobbly shot executed by the former Middle Atlantic finalist and twice former District champion, and swept into a lead she refused to surrender.

Reasonably Long on Tee Shots.

Miss Harper's forte is approaching, especially when she is within 50 or 75 yards of the greens. But there is more than that to the little lady, a versatile Lilliputian aside some of the District women she has eliminated. She can hammer out reasonably long tee shots, and usually she is pretty straight.

The Virginian, who lost in last year's Middle Atlantic finals, was out in 41 to stand 3 up. She played the next five holes in 2 over par, climaxing the battle with a par 3 on the 210-yard fourteenth green, reaching it comfortably with her driver.

In all fairness to Mrs. Meckley, a fine golfer with a sound swing, she has not been playing up to her standard in the big tests since illness forced her to give up the game two years ago.

The match between Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Mackenzie, who upset Mrs. Dorothy White Nicolson Wednesday, was of the ding-dong variety. Mrs. Mackenzie's defeat is attributable to a faulty start, two stymies, one she laid herself, and a streak of three-putt greens.

Mrs. Hume Wrong, of Chevy Chase, defeated Mrs. R. C. Welton, of Richmond, 1 up, and Mrs. George H. Parker, of Kenwood, played like a champion to eliminate Mrs. Hume Peabody, of Army-Navy, 3 and 2, in the consolations of the first flight. In another tight match, Mrs. M. E. Irwin, of Beaver Dam, shot a par 4 on the nineteenth to defeat Mrs. C. N. Wessells, of Roanoke, Va.

Richmond and Wasps To Dedicate Stadium

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—Emory and Henry's Wasps and the Richmond University Spiders will dedicate the new Municipal Stadium in a football contest here Saturday.

The Spiders, fresh from their impressive victory over a powerful Cornell eleven, will come here favored to win. The Wasps' ranks are riddled with injuries and members are still feeling the loss last week to William and Mary.

Expects Victorious Season.

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—The Chestertown High School Soccer Team is looking forward to a winning season in the Maryland Interscholastic Soccer League games.

Eight-Club Valley League Proposed

Mt. Jackson Man Reelected to Head Revised Group.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—A fast eight club circuit with two games at home and two away each week is the plan of the Valley League moguls who reorganized for the next year by reelecting George Holtzman, of Mount Jackson, as president.

The four clubs who participated in the interesting season last summer are enthusiastic over the coming season. Culpeper, pennant winners; Harrisonburg, Charlottesville, and Woodstock will retain their franchises.

Front Royal, which played independent ball last summer, has already made application for a franchise. It is hoped to obtain Staunton and Waynesboro from the Augusta League with the eighth to be decided between Winchester and Orange. Winchester had a club in the Blue Ridge circuit and another playing independent ball during the past season.

Girl, 22, Upsets Jean Bauer, 2 and 1

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11 (AP).—Youth, clamoring to be served in the quarter-finals of the twenty-second annual Berthellyn Golf Cup play, had to be satisfied with only the leftovers today as three veterans of the links game came through to semifinal brackets.

Is Beaten, 2 and 1.

Miss Bauer had leaped into the "favorite" class yesterday when she eliminated Mrs. Opal S. Hill, trans-Mississippi champion from Kansas City. Today, with her putting touch gone, she bowed, 2 and 1, three-putting six greens.

Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd—both former National champions—and Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., star, all strode by youngster opponents to reach the semifinals.

In a long-distance affair, Miss Quier nosed out Deborah Verry, of Worcester, Mass., on the nineteenth green, taking a par 4 to clinch the match on the extra hole after her opponent shanked her approach and took a 5.

Mrs. Vare, five-time winner of the National crown, breezed through to a 3-and-2 conquest of the Florida star, Mary Rogers, of Jacksonville, outsteading the Southerner. Mrs. Hurd, defending the trophy she has held four times, encountered stiffer opposition, but emerged 2 up over Mrs. W. G. Hamilton, jr., of Abington.

Daffy Dean Facing Prospect Of Bridal Suite But No Bride

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 11 (AP).—"Paul's liable to have a bridal suite, and no bride," Miss Betty Holt said here today when informed that Paul (Daffy) Dean, star hurler of the St. Louis Cardinals, had tentatively reserved a Cleveland hotel suite for the latter part of next week.

About two weeks ago Dean announced his desire to wed Miss Holt. She promptly demurred. Told that the prospective bridegroom had reserved the bridal suite, she said, "I don't know anything about it."

Miss Holt returned yesterday from St. Louis, after watching Paul defeat the Tigers in two World Series contests. She returned to Columbus when Paul and "Dizzy," his older brother, boarded a plane for Oklahoma, where they appeared in an exhibition baseball game.

But she said today that the reported romance had progressed not a bit.

"Our engagement hasn't been announced, and when I get ready to announce it, I'll call you," Miss Holt said.

She made it plain, however, that it is up to her, not Paul, whether they are married. When asked, "Off the record, now, are you going to marry Paul?" she answered, "I haven't made up my mind."

Twins Will Play In Baltimore Tonight

To Oppose Southern High; Squad of 22 Men to Make Journey.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl).—Coach Maurice Givens sent his Alexandria High squad through a light drill today in preparation for tomorrow night's engagement with Southern High at Baltimore.

The twins' squad of 22, Coach Givens, Manager Brewer and Assistant Manager Norford, will leave the school at 4:30 tomorrow.

The Pirates and Fraters will drill tomorrow night, the Fraters at Baggett's Stadium, and the Sea Dogs at Hayden's Field.

Furman Eleven Victor Over Wake Forest, 3-2

Florence, S. C., Oct. 11 (AP).—Furman's Purple Hurricane edged out the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest, 3 to 2, in a hard-fought football game, played here today as a feature of the annual Peedee Fair.

A field goal kicked by King, Hurricane right end, in the first period, gave the South Carolina Baptists their victory over their North Carolina brethren. Wake Forest, victor over Hunk Anderson's North Carolina State team last week, was saved from a whitewashing by a safety in the final period.

Washington College Drills for Gallaudet

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 11.—Washington College eleven is now preparing for the initial game of the season this Saturday with Gallaudet College.

Minor injuries have slowed up some of the gridders. Bill Nicholson is nursing an injured hip and Tignor has a sprained ankle. Arty Griems, who will do some of the signal calling, has been on the side lines with a rib injury and a newcomer, Shorb, has a broken bone in his foot and has left the squad.

Maryland Freshmen to Play Cavalier Team

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 11 (Spl.).—The Cavalier first-year eleven will open its season here tomorrow in a contest with the Maryland freshman team.

Bill Morrisette, former football and track star at Tech High School in Washington, who was showing up well in the line, has been forced out for the season on account of injuries.

Two Sweeping Ring Changes Looming

15-Round Bouts Sought; System of Scoring May Be Revised.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—Members of the New York State Athletic Commission will go into an official huddle Tuesday, and try to hatch out two boxing revisions—momentuous not only in the Empire State, but possibly having an important bearing on the sport throughout the land.

Bill Brown, silver-haired firebrand of the commission, will propose that every "important" bout in the State must be slated over the 15-round route instead of eight and ten rounds.

Brown also will propose that the system of scoring fights by judges and referees be changed to make the condition of the fighters at the final gong have just as much bearing on the verdict as the triumphs in the various rounds.

Backing of Phelan.

And Commissioner Brown will not be making these proposals just to hear the musical timbre of his voice. He already has the backing of Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission.

Brown has been campaigning for the changes for some time, and the recent Steve Hamas-Art Lasky heavyweight fight brought the matter to a head. In that ten-rounder at Madison Square Garden, Hamas was given the split decision—a decision which virtually made him the world's outstanding contender for Maxie Baer's heavyweight crown. But when the decision was given, Hamas was staggering about in his corner, practically out of his feet.

"Such an important fight never should have been scheduled for ten rounds," Brown said.

Gridders Reorganize.

The Columbian Football League reorganized for the season last night. Five teams have joined the loop, a 135-pound league. The Northeast Tigers, Hodge, American Eagles, Decatur A. C. and the Wolverine A. C. comprise the circuit. Other teams wishing to join notify Joe Cohen, 600 Tennessee avenue northeast. Managers are asked to mail in their franchise money by tomorrow night.

Hunt Season Under Way Today

By Bill McCormick.
(Post Staff Writer).

LLANGOLLEN FARM, Va., Oct. 11.—The thump of hoof on the turf of the Whitney course here tomorrow will be a clarion call, summoning a colorful crowd to witness a spectacular race—the Llangollen Open Steeplechase.

The fourth running of the Llangollen will be the highlight of a meeting held in conjunction with the Piedmont Fox Hounds, the oldest recognized hunt in America. Tomorrow's meeting on the hazardous John Hay Whitney course will usher in the hunting meet season in Maryland and Virginia.

No more suicidal course exists in the New World than the site of tomorrow's timber and brush competition, which often is called the Aintree of America. The winner of the Llangollen qualifies for the Grand National, the British turf classic which holds forth at Aintree.

Barriers Sturdy.

The barriers are impenetrable—so sturdily constructed that a King Kong could not rend them asunder. They rear 4 feet, 9 inches—as high as a small pony. They are 4 feet in width.

Two of the jumps on the Llangollen course are fronted by cavernous open ditches. Two have open ditches on the landing side. They make a spread of about 20 feet from take-off to landing, which necessitates quite a non-stop equine flight for safety's sake.

Besides the Llangollen, a three-mile affair over brush, several other races of great promise will be held in connection with the Piedmont Hunt.

Opens at 2 P. M.

The Piedmont Gold Cup, a three-mile steeplechase over Aiken fences, will open the meet at 2 p. m. The gold cup, donated by Mr. and Mrs. Whitney, becomes the permanent property of any owner winning the race three times. Malcolm McGriffin, of Pittsburgh, has two legs on the cup, his chestnut gelding, Stonedale, having romped in ahead of the field in 1931 and 1932.

The Blue Riband Chase, for qualified hunters, 2½ miles over brush, is another important competition. L. S. Stern's Bachelor's Drake won the event in 1931; Bandit, belonging to A. F. Goldwin, captured it in 1932, and F. A. Upshur Smith's Melita won in 1933.

Completes Program.

The Ayshire Cup, for hunters that have hunted at least a year with neighboring hunts, completes the card.

Free admission cards for the races are being sent to landowners over whose farms the Piedmont Hunt extends its chase. Others will be charged an admission fee of 50 cents. All proceeds will go to the Loudoun County Hospital.

Preparations are being made by county authorities and members of the Piedmont Hunt to care for one of the largest crowds ever assembled in the State.

The Llangollen—Daniel Boot (Mrs. Frank M. Gould), 140; George Jessell (Mrs. H. S. Herkheimer), 138; Old Bachelor, 138; Poppy Man, 136; Hopeful Jim, 135 (Mrs. John Hay Whitney); Liverton Lodge (Mrs. Sommerville), 142; Border Warrant (Greentree Stable), 138; Red Bridge (John R. Pirates Release Burleigh Grimes

Last Big League Spitballer Shelved for Rookie List.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 11 (AP).—Burleigh Grimes, the last of the spitball pitchers in the big leagues, was given his unconditional release by the Pittsburgh Pirates today.

President Bill Benswanger explained the action was to make room on the club's roster for any promising young player who might be acquired.

Malone Trade For Hallahan Is Denied

Cubs Believed, However, Not Yet Ready for Announcement.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11 (AP).—Officials of the Chicago Cubs, who let it be known some time ago that their ball club would be overhauled for next season, spent a busy day denying rumors of trades today.

Reports that Pitcher Pat Malone would be swapped for Bill Hallahan, star St. Louis Cardinal southpaw, and that Outfielder Babe Herman would be returned to Brooklyn in a straight deal for First Baseman Sam Leslie were denied.

Believed Withheld.

However, there was little doubt in the minds of the baseball experts that both Malone and Herman would be wearing different uniforms next year. The opinion, generally, was that the Cubs haven't decided to announce the deals as yet.

Another report, promptly denied, was that Brooklyn was ready to part with Van Lingle Mungo, its speed-ball pitcher, for cash or a couple of likely looking Cub youngsters. The Brooklyn report was that Manager Casey Stengel had decided to start building the Dodgers at once with fresh, young material.

Generals Stress Defense in Drill

Lexington, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—The W. and L. Generals went through a long gridiron drill today, but were relieved of rough work as coaches started "touching up" ragged edges in preparation for the West Virginia encounter.

Dummy scrimmage against Mountaineer plays was held with two complete teams that will make the trip on the field and defensive work was stressed. All players were in uniform except Hiserman, junior reserve, and Ralph Smith, sophomore candidate for guard, both of whom were injured in practice.

Trojans' Loss Is Blamed on Hollywood

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 11 (AP).—The University of Southern California football team has "gone Hollywood," and some of its players are "toys to henna-haired film beauties and to movie magnates" the Daily Trojan, student newspaper, says.

The Trojans, en route to Pittsburg to play the powerful Panthers of Jock Sutherland Saturday, have not been impressive so far this year and last week dropped a 19-to-0 decision to Washington State College here. It was the soundest trouncing Southern California had suffered under the coaching of Howard Harding Jones in years. Commenting on that game, the Daily Trojan said:

"It marked the victory of a team that plays football for the game's sake over a team of Hollywood-struck boys who once knew how to play football, but having been persuaded that they are really all-Americans, now only go through the motions. The handwriting has been on the wall for a long time."

U. S. C. football players for many years have had extra work in motion pictures, and frequently have been guests at banquets and parties sponsored by film personages.

'Maybe It's True,' Coach Jones Says

Kansas City, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Daily Trojan editorial charge that Southern California's football squad had "gone Hollywood" was used today as the text of Coach Howard Jones' exhortation to his Trojans on a brief inactive stopover en route to Pittsburgh, where they tangle with the Panthers Saturday.

"Maybe it's true," said Headman Jones in an interview after he read excerpts from the student newspaper at Los Angeles.

"That ought to burn them up and if it doesn't they're not the kind of men I want playing for me.

"But they can't laugh at any Trojan football team. We're not going to play any movie game against Pittsburgh Saturday, and you can bet on that."

McLaughlin Advances In Golf at Hot Springs

Hot Springs, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—George F. McLaughlin, of Chicago, defeated Edward P. Curtis, of Rochester, N. Y., 4 and 3 in their semifinal round match of the annual fall golf tournament here today.

Curtis, playing somewhat erratically, was 1 down at the eighth, lost the ninth and never recovered as McLaughlin continued a fine game, particularly in his putting.

Harvard's Announcer In Hospital at Boston

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 11 (U.P.).—A familiar figure will be missing from Harvard Stadium at the Harvard-Brown football game Saturday, and probably for the remainder of the season.

Edward G. (Eddie) Morris, rotund, leather-lunged announcer whose red sweater and sailor hat have been a landmark at Harvard games for 26 years, has entered a Boston hospital for an abdominal operation, it was learned today.

Diverting Comes From Rear to Win Laurel Feature by Length and Pay $16.90

Filly Is Victor After Three Efforts

By Walter Haight.

AFTER making three futile efforts to graduate in cheap fields, the Wheatley Stable's Diverting left the maiden ranks at Laurel yesterday by winning the major portion of a claiming race purse dubbed the Rodgers Forge and placed in the feature position on the eight-race program. Under an impost of only 100 pounds and ridden by Carl Hanford, whose brother, Buddy Hanford, was killed at Pimlico two years ago, Diverting suddenly developed speed that made the form players scratch their heads.

Diverting fairly shot across the finish line a length in advance of Galon Boy, from the W. W. Vaughn string and installed the favorite, and another length ahead of E. R. Bradley's Be Mine. A steady gain from a slow start turned the trick.

Slowly but Surely.

Galon Boy, hard ridden by Jockey Jimmy Sullivan, was in front before the field was 20 yards from the starting barrier, and held a slight lead over Be Mine as the field rounded the far turn. At this point Hanford made his move and slowly but surely went to the leaders.

In the closing drive Diverting and Galon Boy were making a head-and-head battle of it when the Wheatley Stable representative suddenly shot out in front and the favorite players groaned.

The winner paid a substantial $16.90 mutuel and a good time was had by all who played the filly.

The crowd was estimated at 7,000 and the program was run under ideal weather conditions.

Last Romance Wins.

If Last Romance won the first race (the judges said he did) it was by the smallest margin ever recorded in racing history. The press-box, from end to end, voted for Red Wagon. The latter, the favorite, was the pacesetter and appeared to have lasted to win. However, the judges had the last say. All agreed that Advocate Junior was third in the field.

The second race was marked by a peculiar pay-off. The field ran one, two, and a $9.40 win mutuel was topped by the place price of $12.60. The horses were Zipalong and French Knight, and they finished a head apart, with Toano third, a length and a half away. Idle Flirt and Black Song drew the bulk of the play, but there was a paddock tip on the field.

Baldwin Is Target.

Perhaps the best wise crack of the day was aimed at Jockey Baldwin. After the Greentree Stable's Cherry Brandy, a heavily played favorite, was last of the finishers in the steeplechase, someone yelled, "Hey, Baldwin. You ought to be on the Yale crew, you pull plenty hard." Cherry Brandy's backers waited in vain for the horse to make a move. Even after Baldwin let out his wraps, the son of Chaney just bobbed along.

Red Flash was the winner at a surprising $16.50 mutuel, with Snake Charmer second and Blackcock third. They were in this order for most of the 2 miles. The race was marked by one mishap. King of Hearts broke down, but he had been discarded by most bettors.

Pays $5.10 Mutuel.

The favorite players finally scored in the fourth race when Indian News drew away from the Goldfin and Canimar to win in the stretch and pay a $5.10 mutuel.

The Audley Farm made it a "double" for the day in the sixth race. Carbina, at a $38.20 mutuel, was the winner over Kawagoe in a stretch drive.

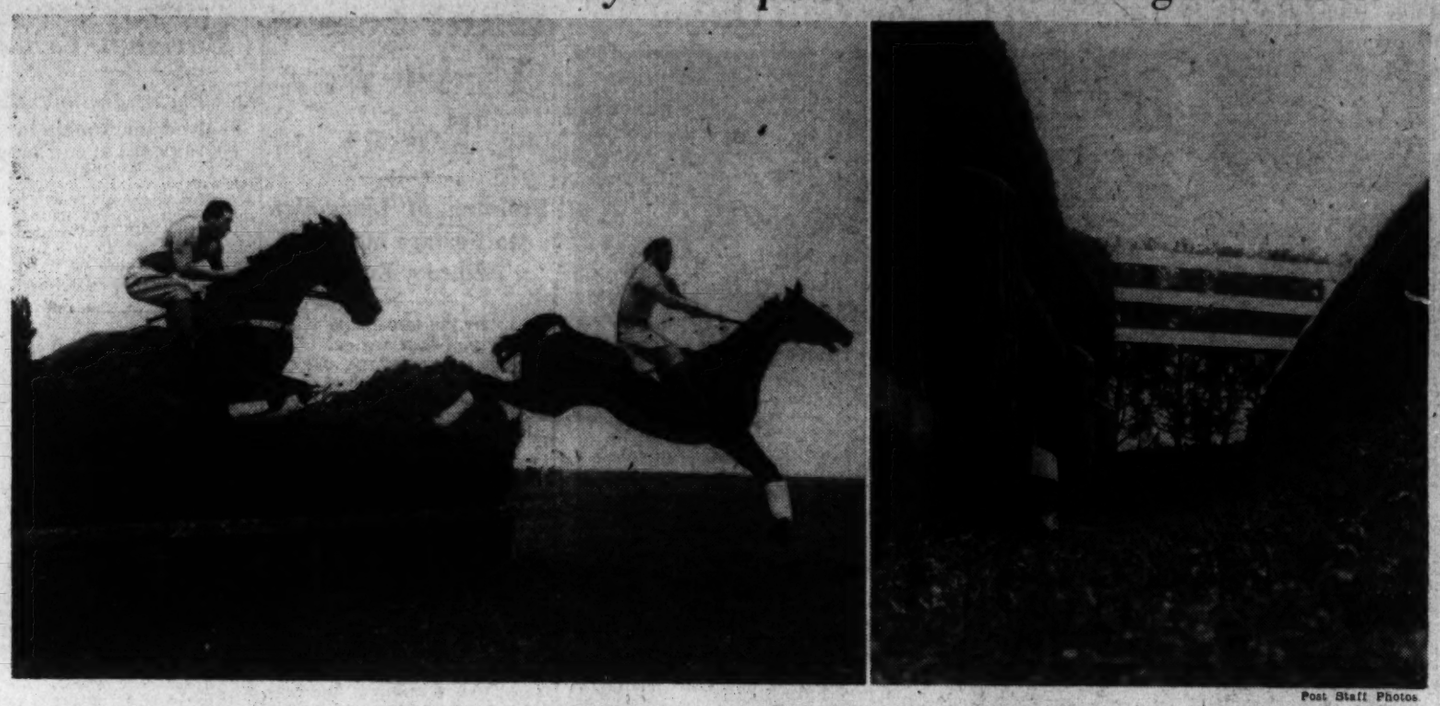
Over the Fences and Far Away in Preparation for the Llangollen Races



Post Staff Photos.

A duo of famed jumpers become accustomed to the ups and downs of the breakneck course on the Whitney estate at Upperville, Va., which will be the scene of the Llangollen National Steeplechase today. What Have You, which gallops under the colors of Frank Gould, is showing her heels to William Street's Melita. The dark, yawning chasm at the right is not an abandoned trench, but one of the real hazards of the Llangollen course, the open-ditch jump, commonly yclept the Liverpool. More than 6 feet high, this wide-open ditch is on the take-off side of the brush.

ROCK COVENTRY, steadied back off the pace for the first six furlongs, came courageously when put to a drive, took a brief lead inside the closing furlong and barely lasted to stall off ZEMBLA. Stocks Score Further Gains In Active Sales

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Inflationary psychology took a new hold on financial markets today, as witnessed by one of the broadest advances in stocks and commodities in weeks.

Bullish impulses were felt all along the financial front as traders tried to guage the import of President Roosevelt's declaration that higher prices were needed. The reviving spark of inflation sentiment was fanned by remarks of Senator Bulkley, after a call at the White House. The Ohio Senator was quoted as saying further dollar devaluation was possible.

British Pound Rallies.

Brisk advances in grains, cotton, spot silver, rubber and other staples gave impetus to the buying movement in stocks. Share gains were general but metal, tobacco, merchandise and other so-called inventory groups were outstanding.

Net gains of 1 to 3 points were recorded for Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, American Can, American Telephone, Chrysler, Bethlehem Steel, American Rolling Mill, Fox Film, Hercules Powder, McKeesport Tin Plate, J. C. Penney, Pullman, Union Pacific and U. S. Smelting.

Wider Gains Scored.

A few inactive issues scored wider gains. Homestake Mining was marked up 20 points to 400 on transfers of 200 shares. Remington Rand first preferred jumped 9 points and the second preferred 6½.

The advance lifted the Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks to 73, up 1 point, to the highest it has been since September 5.

The share market had to plough through considerable profit-taking by traders, but broader outside interest absorbed selling easily. The activity brightened hopes of brokers who had feared Federal control of security exchanges had put a permanent damper upon speculation.

Upturn in Commodities.

The upturn in commodities was the most impressive since the staple markets began to wilt late in August following the summer bulge in prices.

Bulls drew their inspiration from the Washington news, rather than from trade sources. Business reports indicated no significant change in the autumn pace.

However, it was assumed in speculative quarters that the revival of inflationary talk, with commodities pointing upward again, would tend to overcome hesitancy of buyers who had been waiting for lower prices and thus provide business with the stimulus of renewed forward buying. Better steel demand was seen on indications there would be no immediate changes in the steel code to eliminate price-fixing.

Exchange Clearing Agreements Prove Foreign Trade Obstacles

By Anna P. Youngman.

There is a growing realization of the fact that the numerous bilateral clearing agreements which have been concluded by various countries during the past three years' tend to restrict trade instead of facilitating its expansion.

France alone, for instance, now has clearing agreements with a dozen countries while over 100 such agreements are in operation at the present time. The French Minister of Commerce, M. Lamoureux, asserts that clearing agreements have enabled French exporters to secure a settlement of over 1,500,000,000 francs due to them. On the other hand, Germany, virtually forced into concluding clearing agreements with neighboring countries, such as France, Holland, Switzerland and Sweden, has been deprived of trade balances that might otherwise have been used to finance current commercial transactions with the rest of the world.

Furthermore, bilateral clearing agreements have been employed by creditor countries to obtain payments from debtor states on past due accounts and transfer of interest on long-term investments, often to the detriment of creditors living in countries that are either unwilling or unable to effect similar arrangements.

Pact Illustrates System.

The clearing agreement between Sweden and Germany entered into last August for a period of four months illustrates how the system works, although there is of course great diversity of practice. As Germany normally has a favorable merchandise balance with Sweden, provision was made for apportionment of the anticipated surplus due Germany from export sales among Swedish holders of German securities and other German obligations.

Full interest on Dawes and Young bonds is assured and interest at a rate not over 4½ per cent is to be paid on other classes of loans and private obligations. The size of the export surplus will determine how far subordinate claims can be met, but if the surplus were to equal that of last year, it is stated that all claims would be covered. To assure transfer of pledged balances to Swedish creditors, all buyers of German goods must arrange to make their payments through Swedish banks. Sums collected are deposited with the Riechsbank at disposal of a clearing commission.

It is easy to see what a damaging effect these restrictive clearing agreements would have upon a country in Germany's position. They accentuate the difficulties created by a shortage of foreign funds and thus reduce German capacity to finance the purchase of necessary imports, upon which export trade depends. As a matter of fact, the clearing agreements are not working out as anticipated to assure payments to those dealing with Germany. According to recent reports, French exports to Germany, for example, have been running ahead of imports, contrary to the normal trend, giving rise to fears that French exporters will not receive payment in francs for their shipments.

It is evident too that clearing agreement operate most unfairly to deprive creidtors living in countries that have not established such systems—notably the United States—of an equitable share in the total disbursements made by a debtor state to satisfy creditor claims.

The discrimination to which American holders of Dawes and Young bonds have been subject is without excuse, save on the ground that countries which buy more from Germany than they sell her are in strategic position to force acceptance of preferential clearing agreements. Undoubtedly it is natural for investors to take the short-sighted view and urge their governments to protect their interests by resort to clearing, whenever that is possible. Nevertheless, it is evident that if a heavily indebted country is forced to pledge exchange surpluses from sales of goods to payment of debt charges foreign trade upon which future payments depend will suffer and foreign creditors as a whole will be worse off in the end.

Trade Agreements Sought.

The United States is now preparing to negotiate bilateral trade agreements with various countries against which American investors hold unpaid claims. Pressure to make these tariff negotiations a means of facilitating payments on debt account is already in evidence. For example, the American holders of Colombian bonds in default have asked that the United States demand a resumption of interest payments by Colombia in exchange for any tariff concessions accorded by us. If the terms of the recently concluded Cuban trade agreement are to be regarded as establishing a precedent, the bondholders will not obtain much satisfaction, because the Cuban agreement specifically provides that both countries shall refrain from restrictive arrangements affecting transfer of means of payment.

Secretary Hull also has indicated in his public announcements that he is intefested in securing an expansion of trade, not in acting as a debt-collecting agency for American holders of foreign bonds. In any case, such efforts would meet with little success in our dealings with those countries with which we have a favorable balance of trade, since there would be no surplus funds to apply to debt account.

Despite the fact that export trade provides the resources with which to meet debt charges, commercial agreements and debt negotiations should be carried on separately, if real progress is to be made toward the reopening of international trade channels. Premature efforts to force resumption of interest payments that have proved to be too heavy in the past will interfere with equitable debt readjustments and retard a trade expansion that would lay a foundation for ultimate financial recovery.

Bonds Advance With Other Rising Markets

Level Climbs Three-Tenths as Sales Increase to $13,812,000.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Bonds of almost all classifications advanced on the listed market today along with stocks and commodities. In the lower-priced issues there were many gains of one to two points and prime investments were steady along the U. S. Government's and foreign loans.

Transfers aggregated $13,812,000, par value, compared with $11,143,000 on Wednesday and the turnover in governments was $4,290,000 against $3,830,000 the day before.

Inflationary Sentiment Cited.

A mild revival of inflationary sentiment was believed by dealers to have aided the upward movement in secondary loans and among the first of these were obligations of the Baltimore & Ohio, Chile Copper, Chicago & Great Western, Container Co., Great Northern, Nickel Plate, International Paper and New Haven.

Gould coupling 6s gained 5 points to 22 and Missouri Pacific 5s were 2¼ higher at 25¼.

Among the prime investments selling at or close to the year's high were Detroit Edison 4½s, up ¾, at 105¼; Armour & Co. 4½s, up ¼, at 100¾, and Shell Union 5s, up ⅜, at 101½.

Other Small Gainers.

Other small gainers included some issues of American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Goodyear Tire, Pacific Gas & Electric and Pure Oil.

All the active issues of United States Government bonds sold ¾ to around ⅜ of a point higher, including the called Fourth 4¼ Libertys, which advanced 12-32 to 103.20, and the Treasury 3¼s, into which they were convertible up to the close of business today. Home Owners Loan and Federal Farm Mortgage bonds were 2-32 to 7-32 higher.

South American and German bonds led the foreign section with gains of around a point or more, and French 7s were 2 higher at 182. Yugoslav and Italian bonds were steady.

Week's Bond Offerings.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Bond offerings during the current week total $30,716,000 compared with $4,990,000 in the preceding week and $7,587,000 a year ago.

Curb Displays Firmer Tone; Trading Rises

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Trading increased substantially on the curb exchange today as prices displayed additional firmness. Specialties recorded wide gains.

Improvement among utilities, oils and alcohols was generally narrow. Profit taking encouraged by the previous day's rally was a restraining influence.

Singer Manufacturing continued its recent spectacular climb, advancing to another new 1934 high, at 230, up 8 points. Dow Chemical, Aluminum Co. of America, United Shoe Machinery, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Gulf Oil finished 1 to 2 higher.

Fractional gains were recorded by Electric Bond & Share, American Cyanamid "B," Newmont, International Petroleum, Hiram Walker and Creole Petroleum. Lake Shore sold a trifle lower.

Transfers approximated 220,000 shares, compared with 136,000 on Wednesday.

Pullman, Inc., Votes Dividend Of 75 Cents

Foreign Bond Associates Declare Fourth Return on Common.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Pullman, Inc., declared the usual quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the capital stock, payable November 15 to stock of record October 24.

American Shipbuilding Co. declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable November 1 to stock of record October 20.

Directors of Foreign Bond Associates, Inc., investment company specializing in foreign securities, today declared a fourth dividend on the company's common stock, amounting to 75 cents a share, payable October 19 to stockholders of record October 10. The company, which commenced operation last November, has paid three quarterly dividends this year of 50 cents each.

Gross revenues of the Union Pacific Railroad in September were between 5 and 6 per cent ahead of the previous year, according to Carl R. Gray, president, who said today that earnings in October were running a little lighter than in the preceding months and were at about the 1933 levels.

This tapering off, he said, was because of an early movement which helped earnings along in August and September.

American Radiator Sets Modernization Record

It is reported that the American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation made 41 per cent more modernization and repair loans in the past six weeks than it did in the entire year 1933, and that the number of these loans is increasing weekly.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages Five Million Lower

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended October 10, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,455,000,000, a decrease of $5,000,000 compared with the preceding week and an increase of $3,000,000, compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

On October 10 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,448,000,000, a decrease of $7,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with a decrease of $101,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and an increase of $5,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by increases of $11,000,000 in money in circulation and $84,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and a decrease of $4,000,000 in Treasury and National bank currency.

Bills discounted decreased $2,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia and $3,000,000 at all Federal Reserve banks. There was practically no change in holdings of bills bought in open market, while an increase of $8,000,000 in holdings of Treasury certificates and bills was offset by decreases of $7,000,000 in holdings of United States Treasury notes and $1,000,000 in United States bonds.

Changes in the amount of Reserve Bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended October 10, 1934, were as follows:

Wheat Soars Near Maximum In Wide Buying

Dollar Plans and Advance in Silver Aid Prices; All Grains Up.

Washington reports of possible moves toward further devaluation of the dollar furnished much of the wheat market impetus.

Other stimulating factors included a sensational advance in silver, bullish aspects of the United States Government crop report, strength of foreign markets, and forecasts of continued drought in domestic winter wheat territory Southwest and West.

Wheat Near Maximum.

Wheat barely missed scoring a maximum overnight rise of 4 cents, the actual net gain being 2⅞ to 3⅞, with December new finishing at 1.02 to 1.02¼; Corn, 1⅛ to 1⅜ up; December new, 76⅞ to 77; oats, ¼ to ¾ advanced, and provisions unchanged to 25 cents higher.

Broad general trade in all grains accompanied the upward flight of prices. Eastern buying of wheat futures here was much in evidence throughout the day, and there were continuous indications that importing nations were making purchases of cash wheat in various markets.

Export sales of Canadian wheat since the close yesterday were estimated as totaling 2,000,000 bushels. A special feature was word that Japan had brought four cargoes of Australian wheat.

Readjustment of Accounts.

Uneasiness over chances of some untoward political developments in Europe during tomorrow's holiday here, but with Liverpool and Winnipeg markets open, was responsible for considerable readjustment of Chicago wheat market accounts.

Another source of disquiet was reported general light frost in Argentina, implying damage either to quantity or quality of the new wheat crop. Besides, a big falling-off in the official estimate of domestic farm reserve stocks of wheat was deemed specially significant.

Corn and oats traders took particular notice of assertions that official reports showed only two bushels of corn this season are available, where a year ago there were three. In addition, it was contended the Government crop summary indicated a billion bushels less corn available than last year, thus placing the United States on a deficit basis with crop losses shown not alone in corn, but in all food and feed grains—an unprecedented situation.

Bankers Name Committee To Study System

Group Will Seek Adjustment of Banking to Needs of Public.

New York, Oct. 11.—A sub-committee of the American Bankers Association's special committee on proposed revision of the banking laws has been appointed to prepare banking studies aimed to aid in the development of the Nation's banking system in keeping with changing National and business requirements, it is announced here by Francis Marion Law, president of the association.

"The special committee recently held a meeting in New York City at which it requested the president of the association to designate from among its membership a small working committee," Mr. Law said in making the announcement. "Pursuant to this request I have named the following: Tom K. Smith, president Boatmen's National Bank, St. Louis, chairman; John H. Puelicher, president Marshall and Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee; John K. Ottley, president First National Bank, Atlanta; W. W. Aldrich, chairman Chase National Bank, New York City; A. P. Giannini, chairman Bank of America, San Francisco; Evans Woollen, president Fletcher Trust Co., Indianapolis; L. A. Andrew, vice president First State Bank, Mapleton, Iowa; Thomas F. Wallace, president Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank, Minneapolis.

"This new committee held its first meeting in St. Louis, Mo., October 6, with all members present. Its duties are to prepare banking studies with the hope that material may be developed to aid in adapting the Nation's banking system in keeping with changing National and business requirements so as to serve agriculture, industry and commerce most effectively and contribute most fully to the best interests of the entire country."

The chairman of the special committee on proposed revision of the banking laws, which was appointed at the American Bankers Association convention in Chicago in September, 1933, is Robert V. Fleming, second vice president of the association and president of the Riggs National Bank, Washington, D. C. It consists of two members appointed from each Federal Reserve district, together with five others appointed from the country at large.

Procter & Gamble Sales Reach Peak

Volume for 1934 Largest in Company's History, President Says.

Cincinnati, Oct. 11 (AP).—Stockholders of the Procter & Gamble Co. were told in their annual meeting today that in the year ending October 1 the company has experienced one of the biggest years in its history in point of sales volume. Reporting the gain, R. R. Deupree, president of the company, attributed it to advancing commodity prices, expenditures for relief and the filling of depleted stock of consumers, retailers and wholesalers.

However, he told the stockholders that the cost of doing business has increased sharply, and taxes have "assumed alarming proportions."

3 Winners Ridden By Jockey Coucci

Coucci, incidenally, was astride his third winner in a row. It was the quiet little Italian's second triple at the meeting.

The Geneseo Stable's Flag Boy was an easy second, three lengths in advance of the B. B. Stable's General A. The later was a 3-to-5 favorite.

Board Scores County Jails Of Maryland

Prince Georges on List of 6 Institutions Commended in Report.

The Prince Georges County jails are among those of six Maryland counties to receive the commendation of the State board of welfare in its annual report, it was announced yesterday at Upper Marlboro.

Approval of the conditions at the county's penal structures was in striking contrast to the board's denunciation of conditions elsewhere within the State. The majority of the jails, they pointed out, were far below par.

In reference to Prince Georges County Jail at Upper Marlboro, the report pointed out that "this jail, with few exceptions, continues to be well kept. A colored man (Charles Greenleaf) is employed as a full-time jailer.

"At the time of inspection it was again overcrowded. There were only two prisoners more than actual capacity, but as there were nearly twice as many colored prisoners as white prisoners, the colored sections were overcrowded.

"Attention has been called several times to the fact that when the new jail was built no provision was made for cooking at the jail, and food is still furnished by an outside party at some distance from the jail."

The other jails registered on the approved list by the welfare board are those in Baltimore County, Montgomery County, Dorchester County, Alleghany County and Washington County.

"In nine other counties," the report stated, "there were jails which, with more or less correction, could be reasonably satisfactory."

In Washington County a thorough overhauling was given; in Talbot and Dorchester Counties complete rebuilding of the interior and the outside windows amounted practically to new jails.

Steel Code Wins Richberg's Praise

No Changes Are Planned in Prices or Wages.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Donald R. Richberg, policy committee chief of the NRA, expressed himself satisfied with the operation of the steel code, and said no changes in steel prices or wages were considered at a meeting of the directors of the American Iron & Steel Institute which he attended today.

Reports had circulated in trade circles recently to the effect that action might be taken with respect to changing prices at the meeting today. It had been said that uncertainty over the NRA's future policy on price regulation had been holding up orders for steel.

The NRA chief cited the fact that increases in wages and employment were being maintained throughout the industry, despite ups and downs of production as proving the satisfactory working of the code.

U. S. Will Deport Labatt Suspect

The Labor Department yesterday ordered deportation of David Meisner, a Canadian, now held in Detroit for being in this country illegally, the Associated Press reports.

Meisner allegedly is wanted for questioning in Canada in connection with the Labatt kidnaping case.

The grounds for deportation given were that Meisner had been convicted of attempted robbery and impersonating an officer before he came into the United States, that he was physically defective at the time of his entry and was a person likely to become a public charge.

U. S. Alters Provisions For Aid to Students

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Regulations as to eligibility of students for Federal relief funds have been changed by removing a requirement that half the funds be given to those who were not regularly enrolled in any college or university during January, 1934, VERA headquarters announced today.

Administrator William A. Smith said the waiver of this provision will permit greater flexibility, at the direction of college presidents, in distributing the aid to students. The Federal appropriation for Virginia was estimated to enable 2,000 students in State institutions to pay a portion of their college expenses by performing certain duties.

Foreign Experts Plan Drive on U. S. Slums

A committee of foreign housing experts, following a tour of the United States, yesterday told President Roosevelt they are preparing recommendations looking to a long-range slum clearance and housing program for this country.

Sir Raymond Unwin, former president of the Royal Academy of Architecture, was the leader of the visiting experts. They were presented by Ernest J. Bohn, of Cleveland, president of the National Association of Housing Officials.

Gov. Murray's Bouncer Loses $1,500 to Woman

Oklahoma City, Oct. 11 (AP).—A jury today awarded Mrs. Non Earl Harrell, $1,500 damages against R. D. McManus, 270-pound "bouncer" in the office of Gov. William H. Murray.

Mrs. Harrell testified McManus struck her. He said he merely pushed her hand away when she used his beer mug for a fingerbowl. The fracas occurred in a beer garden.
